COMMERCE BANK'S WARRING FACTIONS REACH AGREEMENT

B. F. Edwards to Be Re-Elected President and Eight New Directors to Be Selected by Representatives of the Estate of William H. Thompson.

G. L. EDWARDS TO RETIRE AS COUNSEL

Trouble Arose Among Stockholders After $6,000,000 Surplus Was Stricken From Books by Comptroller of Currency.

An agreement between the warring factions of the National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis has been reached, according to reports in financial circles Saturday. The agreement provides:

For the re-election of B. F. Edwards as president of the bank at the annual election in January.

For the election of eight new directors selected by the representatives of the estate of William H. Thompson, former president of the bank.

For the retirement of George Lockett Edwards as counsel for the bank.

A fight among stockholders of the bank arose after the Comptroller of the Currency and the St. Louis Clearing House Association had ordered approximately $6,000,000 of surplus stricken from the bank's books.

A committee of stockholders, under the leadership of Counsel Edwards, solicited proxies for the purpose of controlling the board of directors to be elected in January. President Edwards and his associates in the administration of the bank also sought proxies to retain themselves in control.

The dissatisfied stockholders complained that their stock had depreciated $12,000,000 in value during the Edwards administration, and that the dividend had been cut from 16 per cent to 10 per cent, resulting in a net depreciation of $120,000 a year in dividends.

They started the fight on the theory that the ousting of Edwards as president would enhance the value of their stock. The stock dropped from $210 a share before the charge-off to $150 or thereabouts afterward.

Some of the complaining stockholders tried to induce W. K. Bixby to become president of the bank, but he declined. Edwards refused to resign as president.

After the fight had gained considerable headway a committee was appointed to work out an agreement satisfactory to both factions. The fight for proxies was called off, and the committee is said to have agreed upon a plan acceptable to the interests that were recently at war.

SUFFRAGETTES DISTURB REDMOND, RIOT ENSUES

Irish Leader Sees Forcible Ejection of Women and Laments "Comic Interlude."

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Suffragettes put John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist party, to the torment this afternoon at a home rule demonstration at Dalston, in northeast of London.

For half an hour the Irish leader watched the forcible eviction from the hall of his disturbers, whose interruptions and desperate resistance to the ushers caused a rapid succession of rough-and-tumble scenes of the most rowdy description.

Men as well as women were thrown bodily out of the hall. Among the men were some clergymen, who had protested against the rough handling of the women.

During the half hour Mr. Redmond was able to utter only a single sentence, which was to the effect that it seemed to him almost tragic that the women's cause, which, in the minds and hearts of so many, was so great, should be turned into a "comic interlude."

WOMAN OVERCOME BY GAS

Indications Are She Tried to Light Jet When Asleep.

City hospital physicians believe that Mrs. Nellie Kinsella, 74 years old, who was found unconscious on the floor of her room at 3531 Bell avenue, Saturday morning, may have attempted to light the gas when asleep and have been overcome by the fumes.

Mrs. Kinsella, who is employed by a Mrs. Fairbank, was revived at the city hospital and will recover. She said she could not remember getting up to light the gas and could not account for her position on the floor directly under the jet. When she was found she had a match in her hand and the gas jet was open. She did not have the light burning before she retired Friday night and, lay in bed in the dark about an hour before she went to sleep, she said.

FOUR MEN DIE IN WRECK

BALTIMORE, Dec. 7.—Four men were killed and two injured in a collision between a train of empty passenger cars and a freight train on the Western Maryland Railroad near Pen Mar Park, Md., last night.

Three of the dead were trainmen; the fourth was an unidentified man stealing a ride.

"Well, I see the Council has voted to approve the placing of that confederate monument in Forest Park," said Riggs.

"Yes," said Iggs. "Now let's rally 'round the flag, boys, when Johnnie comes marching home from Dixie, 'way down upon the Suwanee River, where massa's in the cold, cold ground and the sun shines bright on the old Kentucky home, and lick the fellow that wanted to hang Jeff Davis on a sour apple tree."

"That's the idea."

"And then when Johnnie marches back home again he'll take a carload of made-in-St. Louis products with him."

50 RED-HAIRED GIRLS ATTEND BOAT LAUNCHING

Were Invited by Owners With Stipulation That All Must Be Titian-Tressed.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 7.—Fifty girls, all with red hair, pupils of the Washington Irving High School of New York City, today saw the launching at the yard of the New York Ship Building Co., at Camden, N. J., of the Washington Irving, a steamer built for the Hudson River Day line.

The girls were the guests of the owners of the boat, it being stipulated in the invitation that they all must be titian-haired. The boat was christened by Mrs. E. E. Olcott of New York.

The Washington Irving will have, it is said, the largest carying capacity of any river steamer in the world. It will carry 6000 passengers with ease. It is 440 feet long and will have six decks and will ply between New York and Albany.

STORAGE EGGS DROP TO 19c IN AN OPEN MARKET

Change in Board Methods of Selling Has Resulted in 5c Decline in Two Days.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—Another avalanche of cold storage eggs was thrown on the market today and the price dropped from 22 to 19 cents, wholesale. This was in addition to a decline of 2 cents yesterday, when more than 500,000 eggs were sold at a loss to speculators.

When the market opened yesterday there were 1,670,000 cases of eggs in storage. The transformation of the Butter and Egg Board into an open market is said to have precipitated the selling.

Bird Imported From England by Canadian in Flight 12 Days.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—Ernest Robinson of West Mount received word today that registered pigeon he imported and which escaped, has returned to England.

It apparently took 12 days to make the journey.

The right kind of publicity

Three of the other four St. Louis newspapers combined on Friday carried only

98 columns

of St. Louis merchants' advertising, while the POST-DISPATCH alone carried

105 columns

The reason these merchants gave the POST-DISPATCH more advertising in one day than they gave to three out of the other four St. Louis newspapers ALL ADDED TOGETHER was because they know by experience that their stores will be crowded Saturday with men and women buying the merchandise which they advertised.

The POST-DISPATCH sells more papers in St. Louis every day than all of the other St. Louis newspapers combined. Of course RESULTS follow this immense PUBLICITY.

J. SIDNEY WALKER DIES FROM COLD CAUGHT AT TENNIS

Became Overheated at Game and Did Not Take Proper Precaution.

ILL SINCE WEDNESDAY

Death Came Shortly After Doctor Told Him Saturday He Would Recover.

J. Sidney Walker, secretary of the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. and director of the Mercantile Trust Co., died suddenly at his home, 5 Hortense place, Saturday, when a coughing spell caused the bursting of a blood vessel in his lungs.

Walker had been ill since Wednesday afternoon, when he caught a cold after playing tennis at the Country Club. Friday night symptoms of a slight touch of pneumonia developed, but Dr. W. E. Fischel, the family physician, did not consider the attack serious.

An hour before the fatal outcome Saturday morning Dr. Fischel called on Walker and after an examination told him he would be well in a short time.

Violent Coughing Spell.

Walker was in bed when seized with a violent coughing spell. His wife entered the room in time to see him fall back on the pillow, apparently exhausted. When efforts to arouse him failed a physician was called, and found that Walker was dead.

Though 49 years old, Walker was fond of athletics, especially tennis, and he played the game whenever he had an opportunity.

Friends Saturday recalled that he was in a strenuous match at the Country Club Wednesday afternoon, and that after the game, although he was perspiring, he did not change his clothes, but sat in the clubhouse wearing his tennis flannels.

Son of Company's Founder.

Walker was the eldest son of five sons of D. D. Walker, founder of the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., one of the largest jobbing houses in the West.

He was a brother of Theodore (Ted) Walker who was accidentally killed in the explosion of gasoline engine on his country estate at Clarksville, Mo., about six years ago.

His other brothers are G. H. Herbert Walker, president of the G. H. Walker Stock and Bond Co.; David D. Walker Jr., first vice-president of the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. and William H. Walker who was the Missouri national committeeman of the Progressive party in the recent campaign.

Born in St. Louis.

Walker was born in St. Louis, Oct. 11, 1863. He attended school at St. Louis University and graduated from that institution in 1883. In 1884 he commenced his business career with the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., and became secretary of the company in 1900. He was married to Miss Katherine Mudd in 1898.

Walker was a member of the Business Men's League, the Civic League and the St. Louis, Noonday, Country and Racquet clubs. He was a devotee of tennis, golf and motoring.

WEBBER FLEES FROM CUBA

Informer Says He Was Threatened With Assassination There.

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 7.—"Bridgie" Webber, one of the "informers" at the Becker murder trial, who arrived here Wednesday, departed today on the same vessel for New York, where he is expected to arrive Dec. 10.

The reason given for his leaving was that he had been threatened with assassination if he remained in Cuba.

TAFT PUTS 20,000 SKILLED WORKERS IN CIVIL SERVICE

Order Affects Only Skilled Mechanics and Applies to All Naval Stations.

NO EMPLOYES DISPLACED

New Appointments to Be Made in Usual Way Until Rules Are Formulated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—More than 20,000 skilled workers in the navy yards througout the United States were placed today under the protection of civil service by executive order of President Taft. The President's order was issued with the approval of the Civil Service Commission, in accordance with an opinion by Attorney-General Wickersham.

No navy yard employes below the grade of skilled mechanics will be affected by President Tafts' order. A recent conference of navy yard commandants recommended that the men be placed in the classified service and that was approved by Secretary Meyer.

Toolmakers, electricians, stonecutters, machinists, masons, molders, ordinance men, plumbers and others will be affected by the order.

Until eligible lists for the new classifications can be prepared new appointments to such positions will be made in the regular way.

Rules for covering the 20,000 men into the classified service have been approved by the Secretary of the Navy and President Taft and will be known to the navy yard commandants shortly.

It is said that the order will not displace any employes.

HUSBAND FAILS TO GET DIVORCE SET ASIDE

J. L. Morey Says He Did Not Contest Case, Hoping for Reconciliation.

Joseph L. Morey, a traveling salesman living at the Hamilton Hotel, failed in Judge Grimm's court Saturday to have set aside the divorce granted to his wife, Mrs. Jane Morey, Nov. 18.

Morey testified that he refused to contest the divorce suit because he hoped for a reconciliation with his wife. He admitted that he was at the courthouse, but not in the rourt room when the case was tried, and that he was represented at the trial by a lawyer. He said he met Mrs. Morey and her brother at the Marquette Hotel the evening following the divorce, had dinner with them, and bought Mrs. Morey a $90 suit.

Mrs. Morey testified that she permitted him to buy the suit on the condition only that it was to be paid for out of the $700 alimony allowed her by the Court. She said Morey told her he was sorry she had to go to divorce court wearing such a poor suit of clothes.

Judge Grimm said that Morey had ample opportunity to offer a defense to the divorce suit, and that as he refused to do so at the proper time, the divorce would have to stand. He said he thought Morey was unconcerned about the divorce, but wanted merely to have the order for alimony vacated.

SUBDUES A NEGRO WHO ATTACKS WITH KNIFE

Face Slashed, B. J. Ludwig Holds Assailant in Office Until Policeman Comes.

Benjamin J. Ludwig, proprietor of the Ludwig Remedy Co., 1601 Chestnut street, in a hand-to-hand encounter with a negro, who attacked him with a knife in his office Saturday afternoon, overpowered the negro and was holding him when a policeman arrived.

Ludwig received a cut several inches long across the left side of his face. The negro suffered a few bruises.

Ludwig told Patrolman Frillman that the negro, Fred Haskins of 1629 Chestnut street, formerly worked for him. The negro entered his office under the influence of liquor, he said, and demanded money.

He was told to return when he was sober. The negro then, Ludwig said, attacked him with an open knife, which he carried in his hand. Ludwig struck the negro several times with his fists and in the struggle the knife blade was broken in three pieces.

The negro was arrested and a charge of disturbing the peace was placed against him, Ludwig saying he did not wish to prosecute him on a more serious charge.

MISS BUSCH MAKES DEBUT AT BALL LASTING UNTIL 6:30 IN MORNING

Society Men Beat Drums When Band Tires

Modified Turkey Trot and Texas Tommy to the Noise of Tomtoms.

FOUR HUNDRED GUESTS

Sunset Inn a Great Bower of Flowers—Some of the Gowns.

Not until the sun rose at Sunset Inn, Saturday, two hours after a professional orchestra, worn out by almost constant playing, turned the musical part of the program over to three volunteers from the ranks of the dancers, was there an end of the brilliant ball at which Miss Marie Busch, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August A. Busch, was introduced formally to society, Friday night.

As far as the prearranged scheduled was concerned, the ball was over at 4:30 a. m. But at that hour 75 couples, still demanding more music for the turkey trot, the Texas Tommy and similar dances, remained on the floor.

And when the weary musicians packed up their instruments and departed, Wooster Lambert, Edward Limburg and Lewis D. Dozier Jr. took possession of the piano and the drums, and the dance went on.

Drum and Tomtom Music.

As at the recent Charity Ball, the waltz, the two-step and other ballroom favorites of other days, were almost crowded off the program by the "trot." Everybody danced it and the demand for "trot music" was almost continuous. For nearly every third dance the orchestra played the Maiori, a weird composition savoring of barbaric music by reason of the drum and tomtom effects and the unusual theme and tempo.

The dancing began at 10:30, but not all of the 400 guests were there until 11 o'clock. The first couples departed for home about 2:30 a. m.

Two of the most graceful dancers on the floor were Mrs. D. L. Calhoun and Mrs. Florence Parker Lambert. Their grace and skill in the new dances made them easily conspicuous among the hundreds.

Class in Turkey Trotting.

Off the main floor, Dewey Hickey, sponsor for the turkey trot in St. Louis, was kept busy instructing the uninitiated in the fascinating steps of the favorite dance of the day. His pupils were of all ages, up to advanced middle life, and as soon as they were "graduated" they rushed to the ballroom and joined in the "trot."

The decorations in the ballroom were as beautiful as skill and money could make them. The scheme was based on American Beauty and Killarney roses, with green effects placed wherever they gave harmony to the whole.

The bouquets of roses were tied with new Killarney ribbon, eight inches wide and shading from the deep pink of the Killarney rose at one edge to the lightest shades of pink at the other. From every bouquet hung long streamers of the ribbon.

Flowers for Hospitals.

The roses, after the ball, were collected and brought to St. Louis to be distributed among the various hospitals.

A buffet supper was served throughout the night. The menus included almost anything the educated palate can crave, and the ablest chefs in the city prepared the food.

The table was decorated with flowers and great pyramids of fruit. The ices, carrying out the color scheme of the event, were pink.

Miss Busch, with her parents and her sister, Miss Clara Hazel Busch, greeted the guests as they arrived. The South Side contingent came first and the West Enders later.

The debutante wore an exquisite gown in clinging draperies of flesh-tinted charmeuse, over which misty folds of white tulle were lightly drawn.

Miss Marie Busch is 19 years old. She has a graceful figure, dark brown hair, hazel eyes and a perfect complexion. She was educated at Hosmer Hall and in European schools and is an accomplished musician. She is a granddaughter of Adolphus Busch, who telegraphed his congratulations to her at the inn from his winter home at Pasadena, Cal.

Among those present were:

Miss Virginia Elliot—Pale yellow satin, with trimmings of escuriel shadow lace and just a touch of black.

Mrs. Fergus McRee—Pale green satin and chiffon.

Miss Margaret Drew—White satin, trimmed with gold.

Miss Ruth Carleton—Creme de menthe green chiffon on white satin, with touches of gold.

Miss Anna Benoist—Orange-tinted charmeuse with trimmings of soft lace.

Mrs. Harry Blackwell—Lavender satin and cream lace.

Mrs. Ephron Catlin Jr.—Emerald green chiffon, draped on white lace.

Mrs. Leo de Smet-Carton—White satin with Frenchy touches of blue.

Miss Virginia Foster—White brocaded satin.

Mrs. Ada Randolph—White lace, embroidered in pastel crystal.

Mrs. Sears Lehmann—White satin and rose point lace.

Mrs. Charles Scullin—Black satin with white chiffon and rhinestones.

Mrs. Otto Schubert—Imported robe of lavender brocade, the decollete corsage defined with gold-embroidered tulle; necklace of pearls.

Miss Florence Nulsen—Pale blue mes-

KILLED HERSELF NOV. 14; FRIENDS JUST GET NEWS

Because of the request of Mrs. William W. Rathbun, who killed herself by drinking bichloride of mercury in her apartment in Cleveland, O., Nov. 14, that none of her relatives be notified of her death, friends in St. Louis have just learned of it. Mrs. Rathbun formerly was Mrs. P. C. Deming of St. Louis. Four years ago she resided at 3841 Washington boulevard.

She met Rathbun in St. Louis after she had obtained a divorce in December, 1909, from Deming, who a year before, according to testimony in the divorce case, had married Mrs. Anna Stetsil in Des Moines, Ia., after being arrested in her company. When released from jail he attempted to end his life.

When Mrs. Deming learned of her husband's escapade in Des Moines, she filed suit for divorce.

After her second marriage Mrs. Rathbun moved to Cleveland, where she and her husband occupied apartments in a fashionable part of the city. Late in October her husband died suddenly of apoplexy in Mount Clemens, Mich. While visiting his grave, Mrs. Rathbun gave to Mrs. Julia Odell of Cleveland, a friend, an intimation that she did not expect to live long.

Mrs. Odell said that as they stood beside the grave, Mrs. Rathbun asked her:

"Do you believe when people die that they go to the ones they love?"

"I most assuredly do," Mrs. Odell said she replied.

"I am so glad," Mrs. Rathbun answered.

Mrs. Rathbun drank the poison that night. When in great pain she called a watchman. A physician he summoned was unable to save her life.

MORNING WEDDING AFTER ALL NIGHT HUNT FOR LICENSE

Herbert Armistead of the Lenox apartments, 4335 Maryland avenue, was married to Miss Burton Jennings of 4337 Maryland avenue Saturday morning after they had spent the night visiting county seats near St. Louis in a fruitless effort to get a marriage license.

Armistead aided in rescuing several persons from the Berlin Hotel fire.

Armistead and Miss Jennings visited Clayton at 11 p. m. Friday and tried to prevail upon Deputy Recorder Charles Redman to get up and issue a license. He refused, and they left Clayton in an automobile. Harry Ahrens, employed by an automobile company, and Miss Bernice Jennings, a sister, were with them on the all-night search for a marriage license.

Armistead is employed by the city, and had no trouble getting a license when he applied at the city hall marriage license office. He is 22 years old.

From the city hall, Armistead and Miss Jennings went to the home of the Rev. William J. Williamson and were married. Armistead is the son of T. B. Armistead of the Red Diamond Clothing Co.

The elder Armistead said he had heard nothing of the marriage.

SCHIFF MONEY WITNESS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Jacob H. Schiff, the New York financier, will be one of the first witnesses to appear before the House Money Trust Investigating Committee next week.

A deputy sergeant-at-arms returned from New York today after serving Schiff with a subpena.

GASOLINE LAUNCH EXPLODES; THREE SWIM TO SHORE

John Walsh, Owner of Chicago Craft, Rescued by Fisherman in Rowboat Off South St. Louis When His Injured Hand Makes Swimming Difficult.

100-GALLON OIL TANK BLOWS UP

32-Foot Boat Complete Wreck — Party Bound South on Hunting Trip Loses Guns and Equipment — Lighted Match Causes Accident.

The gasoline launch "U and I," from Chicago, was wrecked and its three occupants thrown into the Mississippi River, when the gasoline tank containing 100 gallons exploded at 10:30 a. m., Saturday, off the foot of Rippa avenue, 9900 south. The men escaped by swimming 300 yards to shore.

The boat was owned by John Walsh of 9470 Ewing avenue, Chicago, who was on his way south on a hunting trip. He had with him, as a companion for the trip, L. Wright. The engineer was G. Sandberg, also of Chicago.

Walsh was rescued by William Goodring and Joseph Heinning, fishermen, who lived near the scene. Goodring had stepped out of his house for a bucket of water when he heard the explosion and saw the flash of flames.

The boat sank almost immediately and Goodring saw the three men struggling in the water against the swift current. He called Heinning, and the two put off in boats.

Walsh was having difficulty in swimming because of a badly burned hand, and he was given assistance. The others made the swim without great difficulty, though the current carried them down stream.

Reaching shore, they said that the boat had run onto a submerged dike, and in examining it to see if it had been damaged, one of the men lighted a match. Instantly there was a slight explosion which communicated to the big gasoline tank.

The boat keeled over immediately after the explosion and the occupants were thrown into the river.

Walsh's injuries are painful, but he said he did not believe them to be serious.

The boat was a well-built craft. It was 32 feet long and 9 feet wide and contained provisions for a month's trip. The men saved nothing from the wreck, their guns, ammunition and supplies going to the bottom of the river.

On reaching shore the men built a camp fire to dry their clothes.

FATHER FOILS PLAN TO ELOPE WITH AN ACTOR

Eli E. Forsee of St. Charles Takes Daughter From Man on Street Car.

Miss Gladys Forsee of St. Charles, Friday afternoon started for St. Louis with Hob Petticord, an actor, who had been appearing in a St. Charles theater.

She was on an electric car when her father, Eli E. Forsee, arrived, and after trying to persuade her not to, he took her from the car, placed her in an automobile and sent her home.

Meanwhile Petticord was threatened by the enraged father and was placed in charge of Policeman Blair temporarily. No charge was made against him and he was later released.

Friends of the girl say that she and Petticord had planned to elope and were to have been married in St. Louis. Forsee says his daughter is only 16 years old. They live in Frenchtown, a suburb of St. Charles.

TOWN MARSHAL AND NEGRO ARE KILLED IN DUEL

Mob Forms to Lynch Slayer of Samuel T. Thompson, Wood River Official, but Disperses When Assured That Sam Williams Cannot Recover From Wounds

RACE WAR FEARED AS RESULT OF MURDER

Arrest of Sewer Worker Sought Because of His Threats to Shoot Foreman Who Refused to Pay His Trainfare to Former Home

Samuel T. Thompson, Marshal of Wood River, Ill., and Sam Williams, a negro, killed each other Friday night while Thompson was attempting to arrest the negro, who had been carrying a shotgun all afternoon, threatening to kill a foreman of a construction company. The foreman had refused to pay for the transportation of the negro and his wife to Plainfield, Ill.

The Marshal died within a few minutes after shots were exchanged, but the negro was alive when he was found unconscious by a mob of about 200 men, and many demands that he be lynched were heard. Mayor S. A. Beach counseled moderation and the mob finally agreed that if a physician would tell them the negro would die, they would not kill him.

Dr. William Barton in a speech from the steps of his office, where the negro had been carried, told the crowd that the negro could not recover and quiet was restored.

It is believed by the physician that Thompson and the negro fired at the same instant. The first bullet from the marshal's revolver cut three fingers and the thumb from the negro's right hand which held the gun. The other finger was on the trigger and both barrels of the shotgun were discharged, the double load of shot striking Thompson in the breast.

Thompson fired a second time, just as he was struck by the shot as a second bullet entered the negro's body just below the heart.

Williams Quit Work Thursday.

Williams was employed as a laborer by the Bush & Gray Construction Co. of Joplin, Mo., which has the contract for a sewer and water system for Wood River. He quit work Thursday and demanded of O. S. Short, a subforeman, that he be paid wages due him. Short said he could not pay him in full until Saturday, but advanced him a part of the money.

The negro then demanded the railroad fare. Short refused to advance it and Williams appealed to Ralph Janes, superintendent of the work. Janes also refused.

Williams worked Friday morning in a saloon in Wood River and, soon after noon appeared on the streets. He said he was looking for Janes. He had the shotgun and, according to several men, said he would kill Janes.

Marshall Thompson appointed Short a deputy and the two searched for Williams. At 6 p. m. they had been unable to find him and had separated at Second street and Ferguson avenue. Suddenly Thompson saw the negro. Short was a half block away, with his back turned. Thompson, drawing his revolver, advanced to within a few feet of the negro, and shouted:

"Don't move. Throw up your hands. You are under arrest."

Three Shots Sounded as One.

The negro raised his shotgun, and as he did so Thompson fired. Persons in the neighborhood said that the sound of the revolver was drowned by the louder sound of the shotgun but that almost instantly there was a second shot from the revolver, the three sounds being so close together that they seemed one.

Thompson fell to the street and the negro ran. The Marshal died 20 minutes later.

The mob quickly formed and started a search for the negro. He was found unconscious in a clump of weeds about 125 yards from the scene of the shooting, and half way to the house where he lived. When John Schmid stumbled over him, Schmid fired a revolver, a signal agreed upon by the searchers.

Mayor Leach, who had arrived by this time, sought to stop the demands for a lynching. Williams was carried to Dr. Barton's office and the mob stood outside while the examination was being made. The men in the crowd insisted that the doctor make a statement.

Negro Taken to Hospital.

Within a few minutes of the time Barton told them the negro would live only a few hours and the mob dispersed. Deputy Sheriff Fitzgerald and Chief of Police Lynn of Alton, who had been summoned by telephone, arrived in an automobile and took Williams to St. Joseph's Hispital in Alton, where he died four hours later.

Thompson's wife was assisting at a bazar at the Union Mission when informed that her husband had been shot. She was taken home and neighbors sought to keep from her the news of her husband's death, but she insisted on knowing the truth and was finally told. She suffered a collapse and was said Saturday to be in a critical condition.

After the shooting Janes announced that the construction company would discharge the negroes in its employ and hire no others. There was talk in Woodriver of circulating a petition to the Standard Oil refinery asking that it discharge its negro laborers. Feeling against the negroes was intense Friday night and Saturday, but Mayor Beach said he did not believe there would be further trouble.

M'KINLEY SWITCH BILL IS PASSED WITH AMENDMENT

President Gundlach Calls This, Which Removes All Bridge Tolls, "a Little Joker."

The City Council Friday night by a vote of 7 to 5 voted to give the McKinley System a franchise to build a switch on Hall street. The bill carried an amendment removing all bridge tolls, which was called "a little joker" by President Gundlach and other members of the council.

During the meeting President Gundlach was so much offended by the favorable vote that he called Councilman Espenschied to the chair and left the council chamber.

Later he said he was opposed to granting any special privileges to the company until it lives up to the terms of its franchise by which it agreed not to collect an arbitrary and merely to charge for hauling freight over its bridge on a mileage basis.

Councilman John S. Leahy said during the meeting that if the McKinley system did not wish to live up to its franchise the franchise should be annulled.

Only Soft Coal Mentioned.

The amendment provides that soft coal shall be brought into St. Louis at the same rate as to East St. Louis. No other class of coal is mentioned, nor is any other kind of freight.

Councilman Rower told the Council that North St. Louis wants to use the McKinley line to get freight in and out of the city. To this President Gundlach replied by insisting that the bill does not bind the company to abolish the arbitrary and there is no reason to expect that it will do so any more readily after the bill is passed than on the ground of this being a part of its charter.

Must Go Back to House.

Councilman Randall said he was opposed to giving the company anything until it carried out the provisions of its charter. Councilman Leahy made a motion that consideration of the bill be postponed until after the holidays and that the City Counsellor be asked for an opinion on the legality of the bill and its amendment. This was lost.

The bill, as amended, must go back to the House of Delegates.

CIGARETTE FIRES A BED

Lodging House Occupants Are Awakened by Smoke.

Roomers in the lodging house conducted by David Fortune at 107 South Fifteenth street, were routed from bed at 1:15 a. m. Saturday by smoke. One of them turned in an alarm of fire. Fortune and the firemen traced the smoke to a room. The occupant had gone to bed smoking a cigarette and the bedding had caught fire.

The roomer aided in putting out the fire, which did $40 damage. He did not give his name to the police.

ST. LOUIS ACTRESS SOON TO MARRY A NEW YORK BANKER

Miss Willette Kershaw Was Prominent in Wilson and Marshall Campaign.

Miss Willette Kershaw, actress and daughter of Harry W. Kershaw, 6227 Wilson avenue, will marry Richard Schuster, a New York banker, within a few days.

During the recent presidential campaign Miss Kershaw, who last year took the leading role in George Bronson Howard's play, "Snobs," written especially for her, attained a national reputation as an effective campaigner for the Democratic national ticket. She was one of the organizers of the Professional Women's Wilson and Marshall Club, which was country-wide in its scope, and she "stumped" the East to help elect Gov. Wilson. On Labor day she addressed 3000 factory workers.

Miss Kershaw is not a suffragette but entered politics to bring about certain industrial legislation as it affects women and children. On account of her early experiences on the stage, her debut being made at the age of 7, she gives particular attention to child labor questions.

Schuster endeavored to keep the news of the approaching wedding a secret until after the honeymoon which is to be a trip to Europe commencing Dec. 19. Miss Kershaw's father said his daughter had informed him of her approaching marriage some weeks ago, but did not state the date on which it would take place. She has not been in St. Louis for two years, though until that time, this city was her home.

FOWLS STOLEN AT NIGHT

Boys of 9 and 11, Caught Say They Meant to Start Business.

William Obermeyer, 11 years old, 3116 Morganford road, and James Yates, 9 years old, 4150 Juniata street, are the names given by two boys caught by Magnolia avenue police about 11:30 p. m., Friday, while carrying half a dozen cackling hens, a much-incensed rooster and a pair of frightened ducks.

Police say the boys confessed they wished to start in the poultry business and that they got the two ducks and four hens from the hennery of Mrs. Clara Stegman, 4215 Juniata street, and the rest from the poultry yard of William Pfeffer, 4240 Juniata street. They were caught coming from the latter place and sent to the house of detention after the poultry had been restored to the owners.

FIRST BIG NAVAL BATTLE IN BALKAN WAR IS IMMINENT

Greek Squadron Sighted Off Entrance to Dardanelles, Turkish Fleet Inside.

LARGE LAND FORCE ALSO

Turks on Gallipoli Peninsula Are Expected to Resist Any Attempt at Landing.

SEDIL-BAHR, Dardanelles, Dec. 7.—A Greek squadron, composed of six warships, was sighted off the entrance to the straits at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

A number of vessels of the Turkish fleet are concentrated in the Dardanelles ready for action and the straits are believed to be thickly strewn with mines.

A report was current a few days ago that 40 Greek transports were on the way to the Gulf of Saros with Bulgarian and Greek troops on board. Whether the Greek squadron formed the escort to these transports or is acting independently has not been ascertained.

It is believed that the Turks have concentrated two entire divisions of troops, with a considerable force of artillery from Asia Minor, on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and it is expected that these will resist any attempt to land.

The Greek Navy apparently has accepted the challenge hurled by the Turks in the recent order to the Sultan's warships to concentrate in the Dardanelles. The approach of both fleets to the historic straits indicates that the first important naval engagement of the Balkan war may be expected in a short time.

FIRST FINES UNDER IDENTIFICATION SLIP SYSTEM ARE LEVIED

Clyde Easley, Thomas Humphrey and E. J. Dymstra. Auto Speeders, Report to Court.

Four men, the first to take advantage of the identification card system, were fined in the First District Police Court Saturday by Judge Kimmel for exceeding the automobile speed limit on Locust street.

The system went into use Dec. 1, but the motor cycle squad did not have occasion to issue the identification slips until Friday evening, when the first one was made out by Sergt. Mackey for Clyde Easley of 5093 Delmar boulevard, who drove his machine at the rate of 20 miles an hour between Twelfth street and Ewing avenue.

When Sergt. Mackey caught Easley he took his name, address and other data, filling out an identification slip, which Easley signed. Easley was fined $5, which was stayed on payment of costs.

The other Locust street speeders tried, each of whom had signed an identification card, were Thomas Humphrey, 5828 Julian avenue; August Thompson, 3108 Bernice place, and Edward J. Dymstra, 4374 Olive street. Each was charged with running 25 miles or more an hour and was fined $5 and costs.

The slips which these men signed, thus avoiding going to a police station and furnishing a bond, are carried in a book by the officers. The main part of the slip is turned in, and the officer keeps a summary of the data on a stub which remains in the book.

To be eligible for release by this system, the citizen must have an identification card, which is issued by the Chief of Police. These cards are numbered and when an officer makes an arrest for a minor offense, the person arrested, if he has the necessary credentials, shows them, signs his name and is free to go, reporting to the court at the proper time.

WANTS EACH STATE TO FINANCE OWN CAMPAIGN

Chairman Clapp of Fund Committee Offers Measure as His Corrective Idea.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Senator Clapp, chairman of the committee investigating campaign funds, today introduced a bill to prohibit the sending of campaign funds from one state to another to aid campaigns of candidates for President, Vice-President, Representatives or Senators.

The measure does not represent the concerted action of the Investigating Committee, but was presented by Clapp as his suggestion of the remedy for excessive use of money for campaign purposes.

In a statement to the Senate, he declared such a law would prevent the "dumping" of great sums of money into outlying states by wealthy communities like New York.

OPEN ASYLUMS OR POLLS TO WOMEN, SAYS SIR THOMAS

English Bachelor Sportsman Sees No Half-Way Position, He Tells Miss Martyn.

HE DISCUSSES MATRIMONY

He Declares American Girls Are Most Intelligent and Ambitious in the World.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

"If women are not fit to vote they should be locked up in lunatic asylums with the other unfit," said Sir Thomas Lipton. "They should not be allowed at large."

That all women should be locked up out of sight—we know Sir Thomas by reputation too well not to know this is the last thing he would wish. I thought I had his view in the newest phase of what to him has been an inexhaustible subject of interviews—namely, woman.

But he seemed to be making a reservation.

"Would you make your statement so sweeping? Should all women vote?" I queried.

"Or else be locked up," insisted Sir Thomas"—— But I do not think the window smashers and letter-box destroyers should vote," he added.

"And you suggest the alternative of putting them in asylums?"

"I didn't say that," he responded. "When a woman does wrong she always errs on the right side anyway."

Seeing that he was too gallant to argue I mercifully changed the subject to another side of its infinite variety.

Praises American Women.

"What sort of an impression of us have you formed during your present tour?" I inquired.

"That the American women are the best beloved, the most alert in intelligence, the most alive and the most genuine of any in the world. You may think I'm saying that because you are sitting here beside me. But I'd say the same thing if you were a thousand miles away from me."

Sir Thomas talks this way to all reporters. It was 9 o'clock in the morning when I found the latch string hanging outside the door of his apartment at the Hotel Jefferson. But if I had arrived earlier the welcome and the gallantry would have flowed as freely in spite all you hear of the early morning grouches of bachelors of his experience. He was elected a member of the Press Clubs in Seattle and San Francisco and presented him with loving cups, he told me, though at both places his arrival timed the interviews at 4 o'clock in the morning.

"And before I left they were calling me Tommy instead of Mr. Thomas. And I liked that," he said, in telling one of the incident.

"You see, I know, Americans pretty well," Sir Thomas continued. "I have traveled here lately as a bit of a swell, but I first came here as a poor Irish lad, with not a dollar in the world, to earn enough to take care of my old parents. I wouldn't like to tell all the hardships I endured getting the start of my fortune in Omaha.

"But I know that in no other country could I have found such an opportunity as here. And I built my character from the foundation out from what I learned from Americans. I always say the secret of my success has been in looking on the bright side of things, and that there is no fun like work has come to be my motto.

Success Makes Work Harder.

"There are many people who will think it is cheap and easy for one who has been successful to utter this opinion. They may be interested to know that when one achieves ambition and arrives at success, it is even harder to look on the bright side of things than it was in the days when one slept beneath the counter of a little grocer's shop."

Sir Thomas was getting serious and forgetting there were ladies present.

"One of my impressions is that in the Western states the American ladies, like the American men, are much more jolly and freer and franker than those of the Eastern states. They have much more enthusiasm. Where an Eastern woman smiles a Westerner will applaud."

"Did you purposely stay away from the ball, where you were expected, last night, fearing your good opinion of the younger girls would be impaired by the well-advertised turkey trotting?" I asked.

"Oh, no! I've already seen their trotting. If they never do anything worse, they'll be alright. They do much worse things in society in other countries, where everything is circumspect on the outside. I don't say the dances might not be demoralising in some places. It is all in the way you look at them, and society here has an innocent way of looking at them."

What About Proof?

"It is pleasant to hear you compliment American women, but in Missouri we like proof you know," said I. "You offer no visible evidence that you have completely surrendered to the American girl any more than to any other in your wide travels. How have you escaped?"

"Don't I offer visible evidence?" he asked, rising to his full height, which must be more than six feet. He is lean and agile and tanned as a famous seaman ought to be. He was dressed in navy blue—not the popular ideal of a lordling. Indeed he might have been a Yankee, but even they sometimes succumb to frailer but fairer adversaries.

"You don't see why I'm not married? I leave it to Phil May," he said. With which he produced a well-worn clipping, a picture from that well-known caricaturist's pen. Perhaps you've seen it."

It depicted a sandwich man plastered back and front with the name of Lipton, which everybody knows stands for tea. The artist had drawn a most uncomely, bedraggled, wreck of a man, only remotely resembling Sir Thomas. A country man and his wife were pictured gazing upon him, the country woman herself none too handsome, remarking "Well is that him? No wonder he ain't married."

Col. Neill Saves Situation.

Sir Thomas is accompanied as usual by his friend and fellow-yachtsman, Col. Neill, of whose handsomeness there can be no question.

"If looks are the great cause or passport as you choose to put it, why isn't Col. Neill married then?"

"I have no chance at all with Sir Thomas around," responded the Colonel. And thereby saved the day for Sir Thomas and myself also.

Sir Thomas Will Be De Wolff Hopper's Guest at Mikado.

On the invitation of De Wolff Hopper, Sir Thomas Lipton and members of his party will attend the performance of the "Mikado" at the Shubert Theater, Saturday night.

$42,000 VOTED BY HOUSE FOR TWO PUBLIC BATHS

Delegates Gallagher and Gazzolo Hold Members in Line for Measure.

The House of Delegates, Friday evening, by a unanimous vote of the 23 members present, passed the bill appropriating $42,000 for public bath houses at Tenth and Mullanphy streets and at Twenty-third and O'Fallon streets. Unanimity was only won, however, after Delegate "Jiggers" Gallagher of the Fourth Ward, aided by Delegate Gazzolo, had had a hard time keeping in line the 15 votes needed to pass it.

Gallagher had 15 votes on hand when the roll was called, but a moment later he discovered that Delegate Geigerich had departed. Gallagher went out and found another member to take Geigerich's place. A little later Gazzolo reported to him that Delegate Redenberg had disappeared. Gallagher again succeeded in getting another delegate to take his place and to guard against other defections he brought in two extra ones for good measure.

When the other members saw that Gallagher had enough votes to pass the bill they made it unanimous. The bill will now go to the Mayor for his signature.

The passage of the bill is the culmination of a long fight for public baths in that part of the city. Several weeks ago Miss Charlotte Rumbold, Secretary of the Public Recreation Commission, discovered that $42,000 appropriated for certain purposes had not been used and with the aid of Park Commissioner Davis she succeeded in having Comptroller Taussig sanction its reappropriation for public bath purposes.

SITE IS GRANTED FOR CONFEDERATE MEMORIAL IN PARK

Councilman Fletcher Asserts Post-Dispatch Editorial Caused Reconsideration.

ONLY TWO VOTES AGAINST

Protzman Declines to Vote on Measure, Declaring He Had Been Misunderstood.

After the City Council by a vote of 9 to 2 Friday night had passed a bill granting to the Confederate Monument Association permission to erect in Forest Park a shaft to the memory of Confederate soldiers and sailors, Councilman Paul Fletcher asserted that the Council had been coerced by a Post-Dispatch editorial.

Councilmen Fletcher and Haller were the only members to vote against the bill, but Councilman Protzman, who led the fight that caused the defeat of the bill a week ago, asked to be excused from voting. The Councilmen voting in favor of the bill were Caulfield, Davis, Espenschied, Lehmberg, Paule, Randall, Rower and President Gundlach.

The bill has been passed by the House of Delegates. It will become effective when it is signed by Mayor Kreismann.

Objection to Flag Design.

The fight on the bill was made on the ground that a Confederate flag in the hands of one of the figures on the accepted design was objectionable. Councilman Lehmberg, who, with Councilman Espenschied and President Gundlach, had voted against the bill a week ago, when they saw location for the shaft was going to be denied, moved that the previous vote be reconsidered. This motion was carried, bringing the bill again before the Council for passage.

Councilman Protzmann, when his name was called, declined to vote. He declared that he had been misunderstood. He became angry when someone in the Council chamber laughed at him for refusing to vote.

Councilman Leahy, following Dr. Fletcher's charge that the Council had been coerced by an editorial, demanded a roll call of those who had been coerced.

"Councilman Rower is one who was coerced," said Fletcher. "I can't see how any man could have changed his mind about voting for a bill authorizing an alien flag in one of the city parks."

Rower Denies He Was Coerced.

"I was not coerced," said Rower, in answer to Fletcher's charge. "Wise men sometimes change their minds; but fools never."

Park Commissioner Davis has not decided where the shaft will be erected. He has been trying to induce the women controlling the Confederate Monument Association to change the design from a shaft to a fountain. He says the same design could be used.

"A fountain could be erected at one end of the flower garden on Government Hill," said Davis. "This will be the most beautiful spot in Forest Park. Then if somebody will raise the money a fountain to the Union soldiers and sailors can be erected at the other end of the garden.

"If the women do not care to convert the shaft into a fountain, however, I shall have to find some suitable spot for the monument."

MISS LIONBERGER WILL BE BRIDE THIS AFTERNOON

Fashionable Nuptials Planned for Her and Donald F. Cutler of Boston.

USHERS COME FROM EAST

Smart Reception Will Follow Ceremony in Westmoreland Place Family Home.

Miss Margaret Lionberger, daughter of Isaac H. Lionberger, one of St. Louis' most ardent sportswomen and a member of the most exclusive set, will be married this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock to Donald Frederick Cutler of Boston, Mass.

The ceremony will be performed at the Lionberger mansion, 37 Westmoreland place, by the Rev. Carroll Davis, dean of Christ Church Cathedral, and will be witnessed by only the nearest relatives and friends.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father. The bride's sister, Miss Louie Lionberger, will be her only bridesmaid.

Mr. Cutler was accompanied here by his best man and five ushers. They are McKim Hollins of New York, and Messrs. Roger and John Cutler, cousins of the bridegroom, and Maurice Richardson of Boston, Eben Doolittle and Richard Mortimer of New York.

The bride will wear a gown of white satin trimmed with exquisite rose point lace, a gift of her aunt, Miss Mary Lionberger. Her veil will be of illusion, held with a chaplet of orange blossoms, and she will carry white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid's gown will be a creation of pink and blue chiffon and she will carry a bouquet of pale pink honeysuckle blossoms.

After the ceremony there will be a large reception, which will be one of the fashionable affairs of the season.

The bride is devoted to outdoor sports, in many of which she excels. She was one of the first women in St. Louis to make a flight in an aeroplane.

She sails her own boat when at Marion, Mass., where the Lionbergers have a summer home, and she is one of the girls who are said to have played polo at the Country Club last spring when the Eastern womens' teams was formed at Meadow Brook Hunt Club.

Miss Lionberger and Mr. Cutler met at the Lionberger summer home while the latter was still at college and the bride was a school girl.

Their engagement was announced two years ago and after a time the rumor of the breaking of the engagement was heard and when the invitations for the wedding were received a fortnight ago it was a surprise, as only Miss Lionberger's family knew that the engagement had been renewed.

After their wedding trip Mr. Cutler and his bride will live in Boston.

WIFE TOOK GEMS IN JOKE, EVIDENCE IN DIVORCE SUIT

A divorce from Annie Althoff and custody of their two children were granted by Judge McQuillin Friday to William H. Althoff. The children, Raymond, 10 years old, and Viola, 6, are at present living with their mother at the home of her parents, 1716 North Twentieth street.

By the Court's order, Mrs. Althoff must relinquish their custody and can see them only once a week. She did not resist the suit, but was represented by counsel.

According to the husband's testimony his wife declared she did not love him and deserted him Aug. 15 last, despite his pleading with her to remain on account of the children. He testified there were not serious differences after their marriage in 1901 until he introduced his friend, John (Turkey) Daniel to Mrs. Althoff last January. From that time the wife began to treat her husband indifferently, he said.

On the day before the separation, Althoff said, he and his wife took supper at her mother's home and when they returned to their home they found their house turned topsy-turvy, indicating a robbery. Valuable jewelry could not be found, and Althoff reported to the police that he had been robbed.

They told him, he testified, to say nothing, as they suspected a man and were on his trail.

When Mrs. Althoff learned this, she confessed, her husband said, that she had taken the jewelry to play a joke on him and told him where it could be found. She said she did not want the man to be under suspicion. After making this confession, Mrs. Althoff announced that she was going to leave, declaring she did not love the plaintiff, he said.

A few days later Althoff, he testified, saw his wife in company with Daniel on a street car in East St. Louis. The husband created a scene and Daniel declared the meeting with Mrs. Althoff had been accidental and searched both Althoff and the latter's brother, who was with him, for a weapon and implored them not to shoot him. Althoff said he told the man he did not intend to do any shooting, but begged him to stay away from Mrs. Althoff.

Mrs. Carl Hoffmann, 6626A Crescent avenue, testified she overheard Mrs. Althoff telephoning to Daniel and that she invited him out to see her, telling him to enter by the front way.

Althoff told the Court that on the occasion of the so-called robbery he found the ends of cigarettes in the house.

When he called his wife's attention to them, he said, she declared she had left them there.

BOY RAN INTO AUTO HEAD DOWN, GIRL TESTIFIES

Clara Byrd, Who Was in Car Which Killed Edwin Nicoll Appears at Inquest.

Miss Clara Byrd, daughter of Abram R. Byrd Jr. of 5428 Delmar boulevard, a broker, testified Saturday morning at the inquest over the body of 6-year-old Edwin Nicoll, who was killed by the Byrd automobile in front of 4153 Washington boulevard at noon Friday.

Miss Byrd, who wore a long blue coat, large blue hat with plumes and black furs, remained in her automobile at the curb while testimony was being taken, instead of going into the witness room. When her testimony was required she was summoned into the room.

At the conclusion of her evidence, she was asked if her sister, Miss Elizabeth Byrd, who was in the machine with her at the time of the accident, and who had been notified by the police to attend the inquest, was present. Miss Byrd replied:

"No, she didn't see it, and doesn't know anything about it, so she did not think it necessary to come."

Deputy Coroner Fath did not send for her.

Boy Ran With Head Down.

Miss Clara Byrd testified that she was in the back seat of the auto, and noticed that the chauffeur had slowed the car in going down a hill on Washington avenue. She said she saw the Nicoll boy run down a terrace, with his head down. He had a hatchet in his hand, she said.

She told that the chauffeur swerved the machine sharply in an effort to avoid striking the boy, and that the boy ran into the side of the machine near its back. She said she thought the machine was running 10 or 12 miles an hour at the time of the accident.

The chauffeur, Frank D. Pugh, who is held by the police on a charge of driving without a chauffeur's license, volunteered to testify.

He gave the same account of the accident as had Miss Byrd. He said he had been a chauffeur four years and had been employed by Byrd six months. He told of stopping the machine immediately after the accident.

Dr. Floyd Stewart testified that his chauffeur called him, and that he saw the boy was badly injured.

He wrapped him in a coat and directed his chauffeur to drive to the Deaconess' Hospital, the nearest hospital. When he reached there the boy was dead.

DR. SIMON OUT FOR MAYOR, DEMANDS NEW PRIMARY LAW

Won't Be Candidate, However, if Democratic Committee Controls Balloting.

CHALLENGES THE 'BOSSES'

Asks Leaders to Join in Getting Statute Applicable to City Nominations.

Dr. John H. Simon issued Saturday a declaration of his intention to run for the Democratic nomination for Mayor next spring provided the Legislature this winter passes an emergency primary election law applicable to St. Louis city offices.

Dr. Simon declared that he would not go into any primary election controlled absolutely by the Democratic City Committee. He challenged the committee to join him in a movement to have the city primary law passed. Under present conditions, if nominations are made by primary, the Democratic City Committee appoints the judges and clerks, casts up the returns and announces the result. Dr. Simon asserts that he would not have a fair chance with other candidates in a committee-controlled primary.

The nominations for Mayor likely will be made late in February or early in March. Dr. Simon is the first St. Louisan to make an open announcement of his desire to run for Mayor. He was Health Commissioner under the Wells administration.

Urged to Make Race.

He says that ever since the November election his friends have urged him to make the race for the nomination. He had withheld an answer to these requests, he said, to learn the attitude of the City Committee as to the method of nominating candidates. He charges that deals are already being framed by which some candidate desired by the "interests" will have the support of the city organization, thereby shutting out those who wish to run independently of any support from political organizations or the business interests.

"I will not permit my name to go before any boss-controlled, cut-and-dried, so-called party convention, or a so-called direct primary called by a Democratic City Committee and supervised and controlled by it," said Dr. Simon in a written statement to the Post-Dispatch.

"I will not accept a nomination coming from any political boss or any set of political bosses, who are in fact only the willing puppets of a bigger boss, who is the front for the privileged interests. The big boss is the medium through which the men 'higher up' nominate candidates, who, if elected, will promise 'to be good' and not disturb business conditions. I do not expect, nor do I want to have, the support of political bosses or their puppets, nor will I accept a nomination tainted by corrupt influences of any character whatsoever.

Wants a Fair Primary.

"I will submit my name to the Democratic voters of St. Louis as a candidate for the nomination for Mayor in a free, open and fair primary, held under the supervision of the official judges and clerks regularly appointed by the Election Commissioners of St. Louis, and if the bosses are without fear for the result, I challenge them to join with me in asking the passage of a bill by the coming Legislature of Missouri (with an emergency clause) making primary elections for city offices mandatory just the same as State primaries for State nomination.

"If this is done, I will run for this important office, but if it is not done, then I will not run or permit the use of my name in any emergency.

"The Democratic party will have to deal fairly with the people if it expects the support of the people. There must be no cut-and-dried plans, there must be no jamming through of 'preferred candidates,' who are suitable to 'big business' interests only.

"The position of Mayor is too important to be juggled like a 'high ball' in a back room, and the boss or bosses and their weak little understudies may expect no quarter if they attempt to 'control' and force an unsavory nomination on the Democracy of St. Louis.

Real Home Rule Wanted.

"If we are to have home rule along the lines indicated by bills already prepared by a certain astute politician which bills are being fathered by a prominent commercial body of St. Louis, then I say it is all important that the nominee for Mayor should be most carefully selected by each political party. This must be done, so that, if elected, and endowed by the Legislature of Missouri with extraordinary powers, not now belonging to that office, he can be trusted to keep the Excise and Police departments not only out of the hands of politicians, but out of the hands of those interested in 'protection.' I do not believe, however, in giving to the next Mayor of St. Louis, regardless of who he may be, power to appoint the Excise and Police Commissioners.

"If I were Mayor, I would not want this power. If the Legislature gives to St. Louis what is called home rule, I believe that the voters of St. Louis should elect the Excise and Police Commissioners. This may be novel and unusual, but who will dare to publicly say that the people cannot be always trusted to select their own representatives, whether they be Mayor, Excise or Police Commissioners?

Answer to His Friends.

"I have no 'privileged' or big business influences behind me. I cannot compete for the nomination with those who are financially and politically backed by funds contributed by the 'big interests' in St. Louis.

"This is my answer to my many friends, and I will patiently await the time when the Democratic City Committee can purge itself of the uncontradicted newspaper reports as to its present attitude relating to the method by which it intends to 'nominate' the next Mayor of the City of St. Louis."

The coming of Christmas will bring no joy to Neoma Parker, 11-year-old little mother, unless it is brought to her through the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival. Neoma is recovering from an attack of diphtheria, which caused her and the three younger children, Mav, Clyde and Frances, and their mother, Mrs. Sarah Parker, to be quarantined for two weeks.

What chance there might have been for them to have a visit from Santa Claus has been swept away by the mother's loss of position as a scrubwoman at the Century Building. Neoma is old enough to know that Christmas is not for a little girl who has been sick and has been the cause, however, innocently, of causing her mother to lose her position.

Mrs. Parker and her children lived until Friday at 1610 Cass avenue. Mrs. Parker earned $36 a month as a scrubwoman. While she was away at her work Neoma, as little mother, looked after the younger children. Then Neoma was taken sick and the doctor said it was diphtheria and his look was grave. The little home would have to be quaranteened and they all would have to stay in the house until Neoma got well or——. He did not finish it, but Mrs. Parker understood.

Forced to Accept Charity.

The mother's earnings barely had been sufficient to keep the wolf of hunger away from her little ones. She had nothing with which to buy food and medicine during the enforced idleness that followed. While the quarantine continued they barely subsisted on charity's dole.

The lifting of the quarantine left Mrs. Parker with no work and no money and the rent overdue. Friday the family were put out of the rooms they had been occupying and moved to 1412 North Fifteenth street, in the rear, where they occupy two rooms.

Until Mrs. Parker can get her old job back, as she hopes, or can get other employment, she and the children will be kept from starvation by the aid of the Provident Association. And the Provident Association, as everyone knows, has all that it can do to relieve the sternest necessities of the poor without providing Christmas cheer.

And so, there will be no Christmas for Neoma Parker, little mother, and for May, Clyde and Frances, unless generous contributions to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival makes it possible for the managers of the festival to provide for Neoma and all the other little mothers of the city and the smaller children over whom the little mothers of the poor, cheated by unkind fate out of their heritage of childhood's play, keeps vigil.

Festival Only Hope of Thousands.

Thousands of children in St. Louis, like Neoma and May and Clyde and Frances, are looking forward to the Christmas Festival as their only Christmas hope. Bitter experience has taught them that, somehow, they can't depend upon the Santa Claus they used to hear about to come to their poor homes, but they know he will be at the Christmas Festival and it is there that their expectations lie.

But unless the contributions are liberal, some will have to be disappointed even in this expectation. Some might have to be turned away. And among the ones turned away might be Neoma, little mother. For herself she would not care so much, for self-denial and disappointment are the lot of little mothers, but it would break her heart if she should be told that there was not enough at the big festival for May and Clyde and Frances to have a share in it.

Generous contributions, today, will help the managers of the Christmas Festival to bring Christmas cheer to every child in St. Louis who would otherwise be sad on Christmas day.

Checks and Good Wishes.

Contributions are coming in from those who want to have a part in making Christmas merry for the poor children of St. Louis. H. W. Peters, president of the Peters Shoe Co., in forwarding a check for $25 as his donation, says it affords him pleasure to do this, and he expresses the hope that the festival will prove a success from every point of view.

Edward Devoy, president of the Devoy & Kuhn Coal and Coke Co., sends $10 "to help the good work of the Post-Dispatch." Frederick W. Lehmann sends $10 and Judge George C. Hitchcock sends $5.

Gets Your Stomach Under Perfect Control

Instant Relief for Indigestion and Stomach Troubles May Be Relied Upon by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

There is no occasion to suffer from indigestion or any similar stomach trouble when you can so easily get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

There is scarcely a well-stocked drug or general store in the United States but what considers these tablets part of their staple stock.

You Can Travel Anywhere and Eat Anything They Serve If You Have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets With You.

Millions are used every year—and when every other man or woman you meet recommends them to you if you will but inquire—why do you continue to suffer from stomach trouble?

The reasons why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are such a widely used remedy are very easy to understand. These tablets contain almost the same elements as the gastric juices of the stomach. And when your stomach is sick and not working just right, it does not give out enough of the natural digestive juices to properly take care of the food you eat. So if you will only give the stomach a little help by taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after meals you will relieve the stomach of its chief duty and allow it the rest it needs to recuperate. One grain of the active principle in a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet digests 3000 grains of food, whether you place it in a glass jar with cooked food or in your stomach after you have eaten the food.

All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and once you try them you will never again wonder what to do for a disordered, weak, sour and gassy stomach. 50 cents a box.

TOWN IS PARTLY BURNED

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 7.—Fire which swept the business district of McMechan, eight miles from here this morning, destroyed six buildings and damaged two others, with a total loss of $75,000. Firemen and apparatus from nearby towns succeeded in getting the flames under control after four hours' work.

Fifteen guests at Hart's Hotel, where the fire originated from an overheated stove, narrowly escaped suffocation.

WOMAN IN MAN'S GARB HIDES ON BATTLESHIP

Found in Bunkers, Destitute, Jackies Make Up Purse to Send Her Home.

GALVESTON, Tex., Dec. 7.—A woman was a passenger aboard the United States Battleship Kansas, which, with other vessels of Admiral Fletcher's fleet, arrived in Galveston Harbor Friday from New Orleans.

The woman was found hidden in the bunkers, clad in man's clothing. She said she was penniless and boarded the battleship just before it left New Orleans in the hope that she might remain in hiding until the fleet was headed for Philadelphia, where she said her relatives live.

Jackies aboard the Kansas made up a purse to defray the expenses of her journey to Philadelphia.

Rescuer of Girl Killed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—A sequel to a plot to kidnap a young woman a week ago was the killing before daybreak today of Salvatore Tripodo, who rescued her from four men who were about to carry her off in a taxicab. Tripodo was shot down just outside his home in an East Side tenement house.

A GOOD PRESCRIPTION

For a Long Life.

This is the prescription for a long life given by an old gentleman in Conn., who is 99 years old and still well and cheerful—"Live temperately, be slow to anger, don't worry, take plenty of exercise in the fresh air, and above all keep cheerful."

Should the system get run down—digestive organs weak—the blood thin and sluggish take Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the medicinal—body-building properties of cods' livers, with the useless grease eliminated and tonic iron added. We regard Vinol as one of the greatest body-builders and strength creators in the world for aged people.

Mrs. Mary Ivey of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only know the good Vinol does old people you would be unable to supply the demand; it is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used."

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction. Chester Kent & Co., Chemists. For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., St. Louis, Mo.

P. S.—If you have any skin trouble try Saxo Salve. We guarantee it.

The trip is a travelogue in itself. You live, eat and sleep luxuriously in the midst of one continuous, grand scenic moving picture. We've raised travel west from the old plane of being a disagreeable necessity into being one of the chief pleasures of going away.

REVIEWS OF NEW BOOKS

ON BLINDNESS

DOES Smith like golf?
Then let him play it—
Do not analyze
And weigh it,
Seeking to discover reason
Why poor Smithy,
In his season,
Should not be supremely daffy
On the greensward with his baffy,
Following, with zest and vim,
What is happiness to him.

The primrose by the river brim
Is not the same to everyone,
And some things bright are very dim
To others in the morning sun.
Some like days,
And others nights,
And each, according to his lights,
Is seeing what he may descry,
Precisely just as you and I
May seldom see,
Most curiously,
The selfsame blueness in the sky.

All men are blind in this respect,
And goodness knows what can be done,
Except to take a circumspect,
Sweet view of one another's fun.
The author has us on the run
In this respect, as sure as fate,
And what he says makes anyone
Who thinks at all deliberate.

"On a Certain Blindness in Human Beings," by the late William James. (Holt.)

THE REEF.

MRS. EDITH WHARTON, whose pen has been almost idle since "The House of Mirth" reached the best-seller class, is out with another book. It is named "The Reef," although the reason for the title is not exactly clear after a careful reading of the novel. Marked by the same careful literary workmanship which distinguished "The House of Mirth," and by many of the same sardonic parentheses, it is rather more loosely drawn as to plot.

A more melodramatic author would have chosen "Paying the Price" as the title of this book. It starts with a moral lapse upon the part of two otherwise very estimable persons. In the broad charity of modern ways of thinking, no wholly irreparable harm has been done; but not so with the creatures of Mrs. Wharton's imagination. The sinners must writhe in a very dolorous intellectual Hades. And not they alone must suffer. Two other entirely innocent individuals are dragged by the hair of their heads into an agony of torture and must suffer long after the sternest of readers is ready to beseech mercy for them.

Of the four, one stands out prominently as a literary creation to be remembered. She is Sophy Viner, the governess, one of the two initial offenders. A fine, human, lovable personality is Sophy, a personality which dwarfs the others in the book by comparison. If she has sinned, the sinning has been worth while to her and never a whine or a lamentation comes from Sophy in her very considerable part of the price-paying.

What little plot there is starts with George Darrow, diplomat, and Anna Leath, a widow. The pair were sweethearts in youth, but were estranged. The woman's marriage was unromantic and she comes into the story with all her love for Darrow untarnished. He is on his way to visit her in France when he receives a telegram asking him to postpone the visit, without explaining why.

At the moment his peevishness over the delay is most acute, he meets Sophy. They are traveling companions across the channel. She is ingenuous enough to amuse him and attractive enough to interest him. They are thrown into close companionship in Paris, a companionship with disastrous consequences. At the end of a few brief days Darrow returns to his post and immediately forgets Miss Viner.

After several months he makes the long-deferred visit to Mrs. Leath. Before she will announce their engagement she enlists Darrow in her service to bring about the marriage of her stepson, Owen Leath, of whom she is very fond, to a young woman not of his social standing. He promises. Then he is amazed to find Owen's beloved is the governess, Sophy Viner.

Oh, what a tangled web we weave,
When first we practice to deceive, wrote the poet. And from the moment that Darrow denies that he had ever known Sophy Viner, trouble comes. The four are shut up in one country home. The writer with a sort of grim ferocity begins the mental dissection of her quartet of clinical material. Nor does her scalpel neglect any single nerve fiber. It slashes and stabs and pricks its way into the very hearts of its victims. Just when one thinks she is ready to stay her merciless hand, Mrs. Wharton gets a fresh breath and starts in at a new place. And before she finally has cleansed her instruments and laid them away, she has made a remarkably thorough and workmanlike job of it.

After all, however, her people are really human. They are elated and morose in turn; they reach high determinations, change their minds, vacillate and yet remain in the end true to themselves. If Mrs. Leath is hypersensitive at times, she manages to be extremely rational at others. If Sophy Viner forgets herself long enough to believe she can be happy as the wife of Owen Leath, she comes to herself and is big enough at her moment of renunciation to say that if the price she must pay is a big one, she has gotten value received for it.

All the principals in the tale are American and this somewhat reconciles the reader to the foreign setting of the tale, in spite of a general feeling that Mrs. Wharton is more "at home" upon the soil of her native land. (Appleton.)

THE MEN OF ROSCOE PAINE.

JOSEPH C. LINCOLN is said to know Cape Cod folks a little bit better than anyone else and to write about them a little more appreciatively than anyone else. He has not shown his knowledge of them more convincingly in anything that he has written than in "The Rise of Roscoe Paine" and in none of them has he written more appreciatively or with a more certain touch. Not even in drawing the broadest of the "How-be-ye" types does he commit the too frequent fault of overdrawing them and making them caricatures instead of characters.

Roscoe Paine is a young New Yorker who has fled the city because of the disgrace attending his father's defalcation and death and has buried himself and his invalid mother in a Cape Cod village. A New York king of finance with a nervous wife and a thoroughbred daughter establish themselves in a sumptuous summer residence and become Paine's shore neighbors. To appease his nervous wife the capitalist tries to buy from Paine a strip of land which Paine has permitted the villagers to use as a lane to the shore. Paine refuses to sell and the greater part of the story has to do with the conflict that ensues between the millionaire on the one side and Paine and the villagers on the other, and the complications which the conflict causes in the gradually developing romance of Paine and the thoroughbred daughter.

The "big scene," which leads to Paine's rise, takes place in the millionaire's home when, with the king of finance ill and unconscious, Paine, appealed to by the daughter, takes command at the end of a telegraph wire, in a Wall street battle which threatens to ruin the millionaire and by bucking a stock pool with a sheer bluff wins the day and saves the financier's fortune.

As for the romance, a rather inconsequential rival is eliminated early and interest and sympathy is sustained solely through conflict of the lovers with the difficulties that grow out of the inequalities of their station. (Appletons.)

MRS. WHEELER'S NEWEST BOOK.

THE fecundity of the literary genius, once it has been stimulated by handsome publishers' receipts, is astonishing. It seems only yesterday that "Satan Sanderson" was running as a serial, although chronologically "Satan Sanderson" can scarcely be called one of Mrs. Post Wheeler's latest books. And now this versatile writer, better known by her pen name, Hallie Erminie Rives, is demanding place for her newest novel, "The Valiants of Virginia."

Evidences of haste might be found in "The Valiants of Virginia" by one who chose to look for them. It is likely, however, that the average reader who begins such a search will forget all about it before he has read many pages. There is so much action, the incidents flock upon him in such swarms, that he probably will find himself too much interested in the tale to waste any time looking for flaws in the workmanship.

What if it does tax credulity in places? What if some of "Unc' Jefferson's animadversions have a rich, chestnutty flavor? Such things will not worry the person who loves an old-fashioned story, provided it has plenty of love-making, a mysterious old mansion, a duel or two, a bit of dialect, some humor and much song-of-birds and perfume-of-roses romance. In these the writer of "The Valiants of Virginia" is indeed generous.

The book has the flavor of the true South. What is more rare, its negroes are genuine Southern negroes, both as to dialect and as to point of view. Its white Virginians are neither overdrawn nor underdrawn. The book is more worth while for the opportunity of acquaintance with its personalities than for the story itself.

There are times when the plot appears strained, when the striving for melodramatic effect almost approaches the absurd. One wonders if a better way of establishing diplomatic relations between the hero and heroine couldn't have been found than by causing him to be bitten by a snake so that she might suck the venom from a wound in his foot. The plot is made to hang upon an old negro's prophesy about the heroine going to her beloved when the clock strikes thirteen. And of course a clock is made to strike thirteen at a certain crisis. It is rather well done, except that the mechanics of the thing are a little too apparent.

John Valiant, a pampered son of a rich man who is all but impoverished by the failure of the corporation established by his late father, is the hero. How he goes to the old family home in Virginia, how he wins the love of the people there and is won by them, how he wooes Shirley Dandridge, daughter of the woman whom his father loved and from whom his father was estranged because of a duel, form the nucleus of the tale. (Bobbs-Merrill.)

WHITE MAN'S AFRICA.

IF you are interested in the world read "The Last Frontier," by E. Alexander Powell. If you are not, read the book and you will be. Powell knows as much about the world in general as is good for anyone, and a great deal more than than about Africa. He also knows how to tell it. In "The Last Frontier," he tells about all there is to tell about Africa as a "white man's country" up to date. After serving as American consular agent at Alexandria, he has been over Africa "from end to end." His observations of African life, as it is lived not only by Africans, but Englishmen, Germans, Italians, Frenchmen and men of all nations now in Africa, are as quick and graphic as the photographs for a living picture film. Every reader will be interested in his living pictures of the great transformation which is going on as railroads, telegraphs, telephones and military aeroplanes pass the "last frontier" of the world's oldest barbarism. The point of gravest interest is the meaning of the change in the map of the Continent since last year. Last year's maps are out of date. The change is far-reaching. In Africa, this year, France has taken the same place as a colonial rival of England it held in North America before it lost Canada and the control of the Mississippi Valley with Wolf's victory at Quebec. While Germany has been blocking "the Cape to Cairo" railroad plan of making the map of Africa "all red" the French "sphere of influence" has extended from the Mediterranean across the Sahara until the Senegal, the Niger and the Congo flow through or bound French territory. Except in South Africa, nearly the whole of English Africa is now bounded on the west by France. Territorially, France and England are now the dominant powers in colonizing Africa. Germany is third. "Black Man's Africa" is hard to find on the map. The next question is of ousting Belgium and dividing up the Congo State. Then the question will be between France, England and Germany. (Scribner's.)

"THE CLOSING NET."

A THRILLING yarn of life among the upper criminals in Paris is told by Henry C. Rowland in "The Closing Net." The book is made up largely of the so-called "Leontine Stories" that ran recently in the Saturday Evening Post. Leontine is the beautiful Polish leader of the gang of thieves, into which comes an American of good parentage, but with no right to claim it publically because of the bar sinister that attended his advent into the world.

The scandal of his birth has helped to make him a thief because he convinces himself by specious reasoning that he has a right to prey upon society, since society ruthlessly condemns him for something he was helpless to avoid.

His half-brother, the legitimate son of his father, is his living image and a pretty good fellow, even if he has a few secret vices of his own. He takes the criminal into his home, whereupon the beautiful sister-in-law, who has become his friend though knowing his full story, is robbed of her pearl necklace. Of course, he is suspected. The truth is that the husband, who has been drinking heavily, pawns it for funds with which to gamble. The criminal discovers this, recovers the necklace, forces the brother to reform and then disappears, so that the sister-in-law may never learn the truth and be undeceived about her husband, whom she idolizes. How he and a rival crook settle their differences and what happens during a memorable luncheon at Leontine's palace—well, that's fine story telling, the details of which you should discover for yourself. (Dodd-Mead.)

FATHER TABB'S SUCCESSOR.

REVEREND FATHER MICHAEL J. EARLS belongs to the Society of Jesus, but he writes poetry like an Irish bard. He is in fact more of an Irish bard than Father Prout of sainted memory, for he keeps clear of Latin and Greek which Father Prout could never do. In "The Road Beyond the Town," he begins with the home he left in Ireland, singing as he goes wherever in the world his work as a Jesuit takes him. It is said that "Father Tabb's mantle has fallen on him," but he has the Celtic ear for the music of simple words and he uses it beyond Father Tabb's range. Catholics may like his poems best, but all who read them will find something pleasing in them. He tries to be a good poet instead of a great one and succeeds. (Benziger.)

MASTERPIECES OF FICTION.

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, having leisure to read, undertook a pleasant task. He reviewed and summarized the masterpieces of fiction which he read years ago for the sheer pleasure they gave. Thus he has made a book which is a delightful introduction to the study of fictional literature of Europe. It is also a compilation in small bulk of the finer episodes in "The Masterpieces of the Masters of Fiction." (Cosmopolitan.)

PICTURE REVIEW.

"Knocking the Neighbors" by George Ade. (Doubleday-Page.)

TRAVEL IN THE HOLY LAND.

THOSE who have found profit and pleasure in the Elmendorf travel lectures will appreciate most highly a beautiful book of text and pictures "A Camera Crusade Through the Holy Land." The illustrations are from photographs taken by Dwight L. Elmendorf and give a tour without the discomfort of travel through the most romantic of all lands. (Scribner.)

SUPERWOMAN IN BLANK VERSE.

IN "The Mortal Gods," and other poetic dramas, Mrs. Olive Tilford Dargan uses Elizabethan blank verse to illustrate the difference between the world as it is and always has been and the world that will be when "put to rights" by woman. In "The Mortal Gods" this difference is shocking. The mortal gods are supermen. They have got into the twenty-first century, or very far along in point of time toward making a universal mess of things by having their own way. Finally they are stopped by the Superwoman, who is the favorite daughter of the worst mess-maker among their monarchs. In "A Son of Hermes" Mrs. Dargan goes back to Athens and Sparta to illustrate this same moral. No one in the United States is writing better blank verse in the Rococo style. She is a Kentuckian by birth, a South Carolinian by marriage and she once taught school in Missouri, Arkansas and Texas. As a graduate of Radcliffe College, she has now adopted Boston as a residence and as the home of appreciation for the modern Elizabethian drama. (Scribner.

AMERICAN POETRY OF 1912.

"THE LYRIC YEAR" is a volume of verse compiled by Ferdinand Earle from the work of American poets in 1912. Prizes of $500 and (2) $250 were offered by the publishers for the best contributions.

News columns have informed the public that the first prize was awarded Orrick Johns of St. Louis for his poem "Second Avenue." And that poems by Zoe Akins and Sara Teasdale are included in the one hundred poems which make the book. Aside, however, from our personal and local interest we are gratefully aware that the collection evidences high quality in the output of American poets.

It is not a selection of "I like" and an exclusion of "I don't like;" but, rather, a careful collation by a craftsman of impeccable taste and sound judgment in verse. From 10,000 sets of verses by 2000 authors 100 poems were culled by the editor and submitted to the further judgment of two well qualified men. You may not agree that the five poems named by the Committee of Award are the best five in the hundred, nor that the three given prizes are the best of the five; craftsmen of equal ability may not agree with the committee—but all who read the volume must admit that the result of the competition is as near to justice as three fault-burdened humans may ever attain. (Kennerly.)

A REVIVED VAUGHN KESTER.

SEVERAL years before Vaughn Kester was introduced to fame by "The Prodigal Judge," he wrote "The Fortunes of the Landrays," a ponderous volume of 53 chapters. It failed to reach the inner circle of "best sellers." Now that "The Prodigal Judge" and "The Just and the Unjust" have created a demand for Kester's work, "The Fortunes of the Landrays" has been reprinted. It leads the reader through a series of exciting experiences, from the East of long ago to the pioneer West, and in Virginia Landray the author has drawn one of his finest portraits of a woman. (Bobbs-Merrill.)

A PEACE SCRAP BOOK.

A BULKY volume of small value for reference and of little interest to the student of affairs is "The Peace Movement in America," by Julius Moritzen. It seems to have been compiled on the theory of the portrait books of leading citizens which issue in communities visited by shrewd promoters of useless publications. It contains scraps of speeches, resolutions and other records of peace societies and such wholly inharmonious matter as Baron d'Estournelle's remarks on the absence of good roads about St. Louis. (Putnam.)

"A WALL OF MEN."

JOHN BROWN is made to live again and the story of Kansas' struggle against slavery is retold in "A Wall of Men," by Margaret Hill McCarter. The story, in spite of its war time atmosphere and picturing of guerrilla warfare, has a note of tenderness to it that is its chief charm. The romance of Ruth and Elliott, opening before the first sounding of war's alarms, is steadfast throughout the long struggle between North and South, and as the story ends their lives really seems to just begin as they start in peacefully to blaze the trail for the Western empire builders. In its descriptive passages the book is uncommonly pleasing. (McClurg.)

"THE HUMORIST."

A KING and his clown fell ill one day,
And the King, as he lay on his royal bed,
Beholding the clown, was moved to say:
"Lo, all my glory has from me fled.
One man wears motley, and one a crown,
We raise distinctions and cling to caste,
But the hand of the Master strikes us down,
And the King and his clown are the same at last."

The poor, pale clown turned wearily,
And looked across where the monarch lay;
"Nay, master, it is not so," said he.
"Though we share one lot in common today,
I must have my wits when I rise again,
Or another clown to your feet they'll bring;
But you, O sire, though you retain
No spark of reason, will still be King."

From "The Land of Little Care" and other poems, by Samuel Ellsworth Kiser. (Volland.)

"THE DANCE OF DINWIDDIE."

THE average book of American rhymes is not worth reading. It is commonplace beyond the reviewer's patience and is published at the author's expense. The theory that most of these rhymes were first printed in newspapers with typographical errors, and subsequently reprinted in book form for the purpose of getting them letter perfect somewhere, has never been supplanted by anything better.

There is, however, an occasional exception to the usual montony and mediocrity. It is not a pronounced exception in the case of Marshall Moreton's "The Dance of Dinwiddie," but it is sufficient to justify some commendation. Mr. Moreton has written a ballad in the Gilbertian strain which is a somewhat pretentious and in some spots a meritorious effort. It recounts at length, and with many varying movements of verse, an adventure of the old Ohio River, and while not possessed of especial poetic merit, it is interesting and readable, and in many respects well done. (Stewart-Kidd.)

"JEAN CABOT AT ASHTON"

GERTRUDE FISHER SCOTT is the author of "Jean Cabot at Ashton," the story of a girl's first year at college, with its social, intellectual and athletic side, the last being one of the chief phases of school life at Ashton. (Iathrop-Lee-Shepard.)

MOTHER LETS US TRAVEL.

THE seventh and latest of the "When Mother Lets Us" series is Constance Johnson's "When Mother Lets Us Travel in France." This gives the maternal permission a wider range than it had in the previous books, which were about such things as cooking, gardening and sewing. We may next, perhaps, expect to see something like "When Mother Lets Us Kill Indians." But the France book is an entertaining and informative travel story, with the fascinating story of Joan of Arc made prominent. (Moffat-Yard.)

KING-ERRANT.

THE most romantic career ever a King had was that of Babar, the conqueror who swept down out of the North and established the Indian empire of the Great Moguls at Delhi. Flora Annie Steel tells his remarkable life story in "King-Errant." Starting with the inheritance of his father's small principality, he enters a career of conquest, today gloriously victorious, tomorrow hurled to apparently absolute ruin. By this discipline of adversity, he develops the qualities of true greatness and eventually sweeps everything before him till all India is at his feet. The book is full of the color of the mystic East, and fascinating character study of its men and women. (Stokes.)

WONDERS OF INVENTION.

IN the chapter on "Artificial Lightning," in Harry E. Maule's volume "The Boy's Book of New Inventions," we have actual photographs of electrical discharges by the Tesla oscillator, in the shape of flames 70 feet across. In the photograph showing "electricity enough to kill an army, perfectly harnessed," is seen the figure of a man, calmly seated, near a machine which is shooting out electric flames 22 feet long, produced by an oscillator at the rate of 100,000 throbs per second. The book tells its boy readers all about aeroplanes, to date; about the motion-picture machine; about thermit, which causes steel to boil like water; about the Tesla turbine, the romance of concrete, the latest automobile engine, wireless telegraph, tungsten, and other wonders of invention on which every boy should be informed. It is profusely illustrated. (Doubleday-Page.)

SOCIETY IN NEW YORK AND ST. LOUIS: THE DIFFERENCE IN MANNERS AND STANDARDS

Explained by one of the most beautiful and popular girls in the ultra-fashionable set of St. Louis, who lately has had months of opportunity for observation in the most exclusive homes of New York and Newport. Glimpses of life as it is lived by Gotham's smartest maids and matrons, given in an exclusive interview with the Sunday Post-Dispatch tomorrow.

Childhood and Youth of the Savior in Moving Pictures

First presentation, in a great double page of half tones, of the film, "From the Manger to the Cross," showing in moving picture form the events in the Nazarene's early life. These films were made in the Holy Land. There are the Manger, the Adoration of the Shepherds, the Wise Men of the East, Mary and the Child posing exactly over the crypt where the Holy Family lived in Egypt, and others. Shown in England, they have aroused a storm of discussion. In the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine you will find some of the most beautiful and impressive selections from the films.

A Revolutionary Plan to Check the Divorce Evil!

By Gilbert K. Chesterton, the noted writer and one of the twentieth century's most brilliant thinkers.

Mr. Chesterton's original and forceful opinions, now for the first time expressed for American readers, undoubtedly will attract wide-spread attention throughout the United States, where, as statistics show, divorce is on the increase.

In the Picture Section:

New art treasures found in the Pompeiian ruins, including a grand fresco of Venus drawn by elephants; photographs showing the vogue of the top hat and frock coat in China since becoming a republic; the football stars of 1912 and thrilling incident in the great Harvard-Yale contest; New York's new sky line of towering monolithic structures; snapshots of interesting society folk and news events in other lands.

In the Magazine:

Another chapter in the mystery of St. Louis hotel fires; the first woman State Senator, who she is, what she hopes to do and what she has done; the adventures in real life of a girl detective; the new interchangeable fur wraps; an apron embroidery design; discovery of the fossil of America's greatest bird, a winged giraffe of millions of years ago.

HITCHCOCK ANGRY WHEN TAFT FIRES POSTMASTER

President Uses Wireless to Oust Dallas Official on Tour With Col. Cecil Lyon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—A difference between President Taft and Postmaster-General Hitchcock, which threatens to become serious, has sprung up because of the President's summary dismissal of Sloan Simpson, Postmaster of Dallas, Tex. Simpson, who had started for Europe with Col. Cecil Lyon, Col. Roosevelt's bosom friend, was notified by wireless that his job was vacant.

This aroused the fury of Hitchcock, who had given Simpson three months' leave of absence. He rushed over to the White House, but got no satisfaction.

SENATOR TO PLANT TREE

Bacon Thinks Capitol Grounds Need a Georgia Hackberry.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Satisfied that the national capital belies its name without a "hackberry" tree, Senator Bacon, president pro tem of the Senate, announces that he will remedy the oversight. The Georgian not only has sent to his native State for the young tree, but he will officiate with the spade in planting it in the Capitol grounds.

Vice-Presidents and Speakers of the House have planted numerous trees and shrubs in the classic territory, but the Senator's colleagues and admirers are looking forward to seeing him perspire while he plies the mattock.

SYMPHONY MEN IN FINE PROGRAM WIN LEADING LAURELS

Evan Williams Sings Well, but Max Zach's Orchestra Holds the Spotlight.

A MEMORABLE PREMIERE

Fitelberg's "Song of the Falcon" Presented for the First Time in America.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

EVAN WILLIAMS sang very well indeed as the soloist of the Friday afternoon Symphony concert at the Odeon, which will be repeated this evening, but Max Zach and the Symphony players wore the program's laurels when all was said and done.

The most notable event of the day was the presentation of George Fitelberg's "Song of the Falcon" for the first time in America.

Deriving its dramatic significance from the Maxim Gorky fable which inspired its young composer, a member of the Pan-Slavonic school of Russian tone-dreamers, to its writing, this composition is marked by all the new cult's novel employment of an orchestra's most obvious spectacular possibilities and by a daring resort to dissonance for the sake of instant emphasis.

There are moments in its earlier shaping when the influence of sturdy old Richard Wagner, the master-painter of music-pictures with a big brush on a big canvas, is much in evidence, reminiscent "Valkyrie" storminess sounding very plainly in the score of "The Falcon," but, in the main, the work was distinctively of the later school.

Naturally enough, therefore, unusual difficulties and dangers attach to its interpretation, but the men under Zach's conductorship proved themselves finely equal to the task set for their performance. Their premiere presentation of the new composition was admirably competent, and it was an additional delight to note the appreciation with which their achievement was received by the audience.

Emotionally, the program is wide in its range. The somber, yet splendidly musical, Schumann overture to "Manfred" was excellently presented. Mendelssohn's "Scotch" symphony came in for one of the most satisfying treatments I have ever heard it receive in St. Louis, memorable alike for the temperamental development of its more plaintive and wistful thought and for the lilting joyousness of its lighter moods, both owing their charm to the Scottish folk-melodies which seem to have made so truthful an appeal to Mendelssohn's genius.

Again, too, and with even surer touch than that of last season, Max Zach led his players through the perilous measures of Richard Strauss' fantastic "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," that congenial surrender of an eccentric composer's soul to a character-drawing in which eccentricity amounting to grotesqueness is the dominant note.

Grimly humorous, with the cry of tragedy sounding now and then, again emerging from the maddest of mischief-making revelry into a suddenly sweet singing of homely song in minor strains that made the heart ache, this most curiously typical of all Strauss' contributions to orchestral music was presented with the keenest fidelity to its changing moods. And, properly, it scored one of the biggest triumphs of the afternoon.

Evan Williams' robust yet ballad-sweet tenor was heard to fair advantage in his English singing of Walther's prize-song from "Die Meistersinger" and very much more pleasingly in a later song-group which included Charles Wakefield Cadman's "A Moonlight Song," Campbell-Tipton's "A Spirit Flower" and Harriet Ware's "Wind and Lyre." His two encores were "All Thro' the Night," an old Welsh lyric, and Cowen's "My Native Land." He received a most cordial welcoming and justified it by such good work as to win great and long-continued applause.

In the Audience.

The Friday afternoon audiences at the Symphony concerts are the most chameleon-like affairs we have, changing their color from one concert to another. One week the boxes and parquet are filled with women in their finest feathers—a sign that they have come from some function or going to another. Then the next matinee there will be an absence of this influence and the audience will be covered with a quietness that denotes an afternoon given over to one thing—to enjoy the music without a thought of the luncheon just over or a tea to come.

Of course there are always the music-lovers who allow nothing to interfere with the music they so enjoy who are there as faithfully as are the members of the orchestra themselves.

Yesterday afternoon the boxes held so many celebrities from stageland that it gave quite a gala air to the usually somberness of the theater itself. Next to the boxes of the regular patrons of the symphony were parties of player people who are singing here this week. One girl, it is said, bought four seats on condition that they would be where she could constantly see her matinee idol.

In the audience yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Benoist whose guests in their box were Mmes. Dwight F. Davis, J. Lawrence Mauran and Charles Parsons Pettus.

Mrs. John T. Davis, her sister, Mrs. Isaac Morton, and Mrs. Dwight Filley occupied another box. Mrs. John T. Davis Jr. and her mother, Mrs. January, were in theirs. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock were across the theater with Mrs. Selwin C. Edgar and Wooster Lambert as their guests, and in the adjoining box were De Wolf Hopper, Miss Gillette and Miss Kate Condon.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Cowles were nearby and next to the Ball box which was occupied by Mrs. P. De C. Ball and her daughters, Misses Margaret and Phillippa Ball, were Mrs. William Nisbett Matthews, whose guests were Mr. and Mrs. Al Morgan and Mrs. William K. Kavanaugh.

Mrs. George W. Cale Jr. and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Hobart of Memphis, Tenn., were Dr. Ernst Saxl's guests in another box. Hugo Koehler had his niece, Miss Virginia Koehler, Miss Frances Garrison, Master Carl Koehler and Whitelaw Terry as his guests.

Mrs. Henry S. Priest had but one guest in her box yesterday, and is one of the most faithful in her attendance at the concerts.

Evan Williams, the artist of the afternoon, held a reception during the intermission, when all his old friends went behind to speak to him. He, one of the greatest tenors in the world, and Raymond Hitchcock, one of the best comedians, had been in a minstrel show once a long time ago.

In the audience were Mrs. Thomas Wright, Miss Elise Pettus, Mrs. Arthur C. Garrison, Mrs. George A. Baker Jr. Mrs. Douglass Cook; Mrs. Robert Aall occupied another box. Mrs. Lawson L. Whittemore, Miss Derys Cabanne, Mrs. Volney Turner, Mrs. Norris B. Gregg, Mrs. Charles Northrop of New York, who was Miss Evelyn Watson of St. Louis; Miss Stella Garrett, Mrs. James Wear, Mrs. Max Kotany, Mrs. James W. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. John Nickerson, Mrs. Lee Moore.

"SAIL FROM BOSTON"

The Directors of the Port of Boston have now brought to a conclusion negotiations begun two years ago by the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co., and have signed contracts with the Hamburg American Steamship Co. under which that company will give to Boston the services of the four largest and best equipped boats it is now operating.

The Hamburg American Line owns more steamers, has a far larger tonnage and gathers more traffic than any other steamship company in the world. It has been for many years developing a freight traffic at the port of Boston. In co-operation with the Port Directors it now offers Boston and New England the greatest opportunity in development of passenger traffic ever offered to any port in the world.

The Cunard Steamship Co. is already operating from the port of Boston two of the largest transatlantic steamers which in comfort and convenience are the equal of any plying from any American port.

The White Star Line is operating first-class passenger services from Boston to Liverpool and the Mediterranean. Four other transatlantic passenger lines already make Boston a terminus and overtures have been made by three other lines for a Boston terminus.

The New England Railroad Lines desire to co-operate with the people of New England in the up-building of the business of New England and the port of Boston. To that end the Boston & Maine and New Haven railroad systems are summoning their agents into conferences to perfect plans for co-operative work under the call "Sail from Boston; But First See New England."

The ambition of a large majority of the People of the United States is to visit Boston and New England. So far as they are ocean travellers they can most advantageously do this by making Boston their sailing port.

People living in St. Louis and the West who contemplate travel are invited to send their names and addresses to the "New England Railroad Lines, Room 492 South Terminal, Boston, Mass.," that they may be supplied directly with information now being prepared concerning points of interest in New England and Boston, and especially with data concerning sailings from the port of Boston.

MR. TAFT'S NEW WISDOM.

The last thing in President Taft's general message is the following sentence:

> Now that a new Congress has been elected on a platform of tariff for revenue only rather than a protective tariff, and is to revise the tariff on that basis, it is needless for me to occupy the time of Congress with arguments or recommendations in favor of a protective tariff.

No exceptional wisdom is required to see the futility of a discussion at this time of the protective tariff, especially from the President, whose sad, bad tariff record caused the recent debacle.

But the President is, at least, wiser than the stand-pat Congress—he has seen enough to step around a hole. He has learned something from experience.

Financial vicissitudes cause predictions that the iron industry is about to play out in Missouri, just after the State Geologist has issued a new book of 434 pages telling about the great extent and value of the ore deposits.

CROSSING SEPARATION PLANS.

The Kreismann administration has decided wisely to concentrate on three important crossing separation plans instead of attempting to carry out a wholesale scheme of grade-crossing abolition.

The three special plans selected for completion are important, practical and necessary to safety and to the development of the general plan.

Surely there should be no serious obstacle to obtaining the co-operation of the Rock Island in depressing the tracks north of Forest Park. This work is so obviously necessary that railroad officials should be willing to make some sacrifices in order to assure the success of the project of abolishing all grade crossings there. The Wabash has voluntarily offered to expend $900,000 as its share of the cost. The Rock Island can not well afford to exhibit a niggardly spirit in strong contrast with the generous spirit of the Wabash.

The abolition of the Wabash crossing at Delmar avenue is practically a continuation of the other plan and soon or late will have to be done. From every standpoint it would be better to complete the entire work at once.

The Terminal viaduct on Union avenue should by all means be built. The differences between the city and the Terminal are insignificant. The Terminal should voluntarily agree to the city's plan.

The completion of these crossing plans would be an excellent beginning. It would place a valuable achievement to the credit of the administration.

Illinois has given its formal consent to the route for the East Side free bridge approach. Now if St. Louis will vote the bonds we can finish the bridge.

A MOHAMMEDAN SWITZERLAND.

The first of Mohammedan republics will emerge from the confusion of races and religions and governments in Southwestern Europe if proposals as to Albania are not modified.

Surely no republic ever had stranger origin than this one. Such territory as it might be practical to assign to it cannot exceed 22,000 square miles and might not exceed 12,000. The people number less than 2,000,000, of whom only about 200,000 are Christians. It would thus be a republic which in size, topography and location, as well as some characteristics of inhabitants, would strongly resemble Switzerland.

Few of the newer republics, certainly not Portugal or China, have had better prospects of realizing republican ideals, notwithstanding certain handicaps. Even Turkey's control over most of the mountaineer tribes has been only nominal. Probably Austria reluctantly consented to the idea of a republic because of the dubious outlook for any other form of government. The peril of discord and factionalism can be minimized by giving the several tribes the largest practical measure of home rule in local and religious affairs, reserving other matters for the central republican government.

The republic of the Albanians, oldest race in Europe, ought to be a source of pride to others in the world's increasing family of republics. They have no literature, but their traditions and standards are high. One of their medieval leaders lived long enough to whip 23 Turkish armies. They have that first essential to the success of a republic, familiarity with the responsibilities of self-government. Possibly a Federal union may yet be formed out of the Balkan states.

"DIG HER DEEP THRU DIXIE."

The project for 14 feet through the valley has come to a critical period. Mr. Taft's $50,000,000 recommendation was chiefly for flood abatement. At Washington the deep waterway movement is said to have lost ground during the past year. Congressman Bartholdt is quoted to the effect that the 14-foot depth is impractical and that effort should be concentrated on a nine-foot channel.

Advocates of a proper plan of Mississippi improvement should be careful about accepting any compromise that will exhaust the willingness of Congress to appropriate without insuring adequate benefits in navigation. It was precisely on that shortsighted, wasteful plan that millions have been spent in the past, with results so meager as to render congressmen skeptical about the possibilities of the stream.

"Provision for 14 feet is practical at no unjustifiable cost," sums up the opinion of competent engineering authority. The 186-mile stretch from St. Louis to Cairo now has from 12 to 14 feet during eight months of the year. The short drainage canal from Chicago to Lockport has 24 feet, and in no plan for its extension to Utica on the Illinois River is less than the same depth proposed. The adverse report of the Bixby board was based largely on the needs of commerce under present conditions. Great Lakes analogies seem to have influenced its conclusion that 14 feet would provide more water than barges need and not enough for ocean-going vessels.

The larger the vessel the greater the economy with which freight can be carried. A type of boat developed on 14 feet can not carry as cheaply as the type of Great Lakes vessels, but it can carry cheaper than a type developed on nine feet. "No 1000-ton barge can compete with a box car," says J. J. Hill, "but no box car on earth can compete with a 10,000-ton barge."

The Panama Canal will create possibilities in Mississippi traffic of which the Bixby board has not dreamed. It is an old battle, this battle over depths. "We demand," said the platform of the fifth waterway convention, "that the plans for a waterway connecting the Great Lakes with the Gulf provide an initial depth of not less than 14 feet." That is the line to fight it out on. There should be no surrender. "Dig her deep thru Dixie."

The forensic methods, views on American institutions and ripping diction of Gov. Cole L. Blease of South Carolina seem to qualify him for the higher opportunities of the Bull Moose leadership. The Democratic party is too restricted a place for him.

MONUMENT BILL PASSED.

It was a clean-up session in the City Council yesterday. In addition to the Confederate monument bill, it passed the long-delayed McKinley switch bill, with new safeguards, confirmed Capt. Primavesi, once rejected as Workhouse Superintendent, and approved the parole bill recently voted down. Its regretted action in defeating the municipal lodging house bill, accordingly, can not be regarded as final.

An incident of curious quality, 51 years after the opening of the Civil War, is ended happily in the action on the monument bill. A gracious memorial to bravery and devotion in the cosmopolitan city of St. Louis is not to be proscribed because of an emblem of historical significance only. The better judgment the Council has shown on reflection is gratifying. Let us have peace.

But could not St. Louis schoolhouses be used as civic centers if every care was taken not to impart any of that education which the court decision says is illegal after the age of 20 years?

FOOLISH QUESTIONS.

A great many people are undoubtedly glad that at last a man has been arrested for asking foolish questions. That is what happened the other night to Delegate Giegerich, whose inquisitiveness exasperated a policeman.

While our sympathies are entirely with the policeman, we are convinced that he is in need of some moral discipline. For instance, he ought to be sentenced to edit the "Answers to Queries" column of this paper, or put on duty at the Information Bureau of Union Station, or he ought to be set down in the witness chair of the Circuit Court and compelled to answer to direct and cross examination by the young attorneys—and some of the old ones.

These recommendations, however, are quite aside from our profound respect for the foolish question as an aid of progress. Most of the world's enlightenment has come in response to questions which were at first regarded as foolish and we owe much to the questing intelligences which were not afraid to ask them at the risk of being considered public nuisances. The interrogation point has always been the torch of civilization.

The convictions in the case of the Glass Trust and Naval Stores magnates show Mr. Wickersham what can be done when Sherman law criminal prosecutions are vigorous and the facts are clear.

A NUISANCE TO THE NOSTRILS.

On behalf of all the people who have to breathe the atmosphere of downtown St. Louis, we urge the House of Delegates to pass the ordinance, already passed by the Council, which will prohibit automobiles from discharging smoke, fumes, stench and poison, under penalty.

There is no more general and no more acute nuisance in St. Louis than the foul and fuming motor. St. Louis may as easily be rid of it as other cities. No ordinance can be more readily enforced than this, since arrests will be the business of the downtown traffic squad who have the motors at their mercy.

There is absolutely no excuse for the smoking motor when a police court fine will cure it.

The competence and experience in the sergeant-at-arms business which Col. John I. Martin would bring to the vacancy in the Senate raise him out of the amateur into the professional class.

Most any private concern with the City Water Department's volume of business would be willing to pay the postage on the receipts to paying customers.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Three Cent Fares for Straphangers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

To give a rest to everybody during the "rush hours," that so many people ask for, is simply impossible. It would probably take double the present number of cars and would "bunch" them up on the downtown loops so as to "tie up" every line running to the business center. That "no passengers be taken when the seats are all occupied" is another impossibility. The "rush home crowd" has got to get there, and would throw the conductor and motorman overboard if they refused to run the car. People would not stand on a corner in the cold or rain and see car after car pass by. Every passenger who pays a nickel is entitled to a seat, and as long as there is a vacant seat when the passenger enters, he should pay a nickel. If the car company cannot furnish what they charge for it should not be allowed to demand pay for what it cannot furnish, say a seat and transportation, but should only be permitted to collect for what it "does" give, i. e., transportation, and three cents would be a reasonable sum therefor. Public Utilities Problem.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Mr. C. W. Long's letter suggesting the use of the initiative and referendum as a cure for our street car troubles appeals to the thinking man. As long as the people vote to continue a system which is run for the profit of the few instead of for the interest of the people, so long will we have to submit to such service as the monopolies see fit to give us. The problem is very simple; it is either Democratic rule by the people or public utilities, or the rule of the trusts for profit. The failure of St. Louis to collect taxes from the United Railways Co. plainly shows what benefit we might hope to reap through a commission of public spirited citizens.

When the people are ready as a whole to vote for collective ownership of utilities collectively used, then and not till then will we see railroads, gas, electric, telegraph, telephone companies, etc., managed for the best interest of the people, instead of for the private gain of a few.

Library a Source of Pride.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The new public library should be a source of pride to all our citizens and we should all feel greatful to Mr. Carnegie for his liberal contribution and to the original donors of a portion of the land (the Lucas family), not forgetting the late Mr. Frederick Crunden, who induced Mr. Carnegie to contribute and to whose tireless zeal is chiefly due the carrying out of the great work.

The architect, Mr. Cass Gilbert, is to be congratulated for the perfection of every detail from the beautiful and artistic interior and exterior of the building itself to the perfect work in the grounds surrounding it. Taken as a whole, it is one of the beauty spots of our city and all who contributed in any way to its perfection may well feel proud of their work.

Such a beauty spot with the sunken garden adjoining was needed downtown and will be enjoyed especially by the many who seldom get out to the distant parks and to the sojourners at the hotels. The locality is a pleasant contrast to the thickly-built surroundings.

Breaking Trolley Wires.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Within the last few weeks I have received so many shocks caused by falling trolley wires that they have almost rendered me unfit for my daily avocation. I don't believe the trolley wires are ever inspected, as, from frequent observation, I notice where they break it is always preceded by terrific flashes.

If you can do anything to save a wage earner's nerves, I ask you to kindly publish this letter, so that not only myself but the general public will know whether these accidents are unavoidable or negligence on the part of the United Railways Co. MARGARET BRAUNE.

For Better Milk.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The question of a new milk bill for St. Louis is one of the most important matters before us this year, or, indeed, at any time. Particularly does Section 20 of the bill, which sets forth the standard of the milk to be allowed, commend itself to the attention of the people of this city. The standard set is not an exacting one and does not call for the impossible. On the contrary it is a description of such milk as any ordinary cow should produce when properly fed, containing not more than 88 per cent water.

Is there no way of waking the people to the facts connected with the habits of certain uninspected dairies in St. Louis? Do they know that this bill is for their good and the protection of their children and that it has been worked out by those most earnestly seeking the public good? There is a constant effort on the part of certain dairymen to force adulterated and unclean milk on the community, watered, swarming with bacteria and filth; carelessly milked from dirty cows by milkers who constantly wet their soiled hands in the milk bucket, virtually washing them in the milk that comes to market.

It is only at such immoral people that the bill is aimed, and it should be earnestly and actively supported by all good citizens. We need to wake the public conscience in regard to this matter, and I thank you for what you have already done, in this direction. A MOTHER.

Compulsory Vaccination.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Once more the School Board is going its semi-yearly round of tyranny, i. e., attempting to vaccinate pupils in our "free" and public schools. This is the most detestable piece of tyranny that has ever been "put over" on the liberty-loving St. Louisans. Letting alone the fact that it is a cheat and swindle, let us remember that it is a most bigoted piece of tyranny to compel us to be vaccinated against our will.

It is this self-assumed right that causes the students in our public schools to undergo an examination every year, in order that the School Board may ascertain whether or not they are vaccinated. This was even done in one of our high schools the other day.

Let us appeal to reason; let us appeal to the old spirit of liberty that caused our forefathers to spill their blood in order that it might be preserved; let us appeal to the 20th century American, who is still an American and, therefore, loves liberty.

The School Board has gone too far. We will not stand for it. They must stop, they will stop, that's all there is to it. When the School Board comes around and insists that your child be vaccinated assert your rights and don't dare to let the "Board of Tyrants" vaccinate your child against your wishes. We are full of this up to our necks. LOVER OF LIBERTY.

Traveling With Jack.

From Harper's Bazar.

Little Jack, aged 5, had accompanied his mother on a trip to the city.

When the conductor came around to collect the fares he asked the usual question:

"How old is the boy?"

After being informed the correct age, which did not require a fare, the conductor passed on to the next person.

The lad sat quite still, apparently pondering over something; then, concluding that full information had not been given, he called loudly to the conductor at the other end of the car.

"And mother's 35."

INSTRUCTING THE IGNORANT

"To Hell With the Law!"

NOT TURKEY TO THE TURKS.

From the New York Sun.

"Sublime Porte" is one of those European expressions for Turkish institutions which are never used by the Turks themselves. The Ottoman Government's official title for itself is Hukyumet-i-seniye, the glorious government.

Turks do not speak of "the Sultan," but of the "Padishah," a Persian term meaning the father of monarchs.

Turkey is a geographical expression used outside the land it denotes but unknown to those who dwell in it. The Turks talk of Rumelia Anadol. The foreign residents may speak of Anatolia, Albania or the Lebanon. They will tell you that they live at Smyrna, Salonica or Beyrout or elsewhere, but the word Turkey never crosses their lips. In the realm itself there is no collective name for the territory of the Sultan.

Albania, Bulgaria and Roumania, although contiguous to one another, speak three totally different languages. The Bulgarian tongue is that of ancient Russia, and Roumanian resembles that of ancient Rome more closely than modern Italian does. Albanian has no marked affinity with any other language, though philologists have discovered in it some slight traces of Basque and Hungarian influences.

TYPE AS PROJECTILES.

From the London Answers.

When Sir John Gorst was occupying an editorial chair in Waikato, half a century ago, he found himself, to his dismay, in the center of the Maori fighting.

"One afternoon," he recalls, "when the Maoris ran short of ammunition for their 14-pound gun, they raided the te hakiol (printing works), and charged heir oannon with type and stereo blocks, which proved very destructive missiles.

"One brave soldier was sent to the hospital by a patent medicine advertisement; another lost his leg to a solid leader on the land bill, and I myself narrowly escaped an exit from the world through the medium of one of my own poems."

No less resourceful was a force of native Indians when besieging a fort held by United States troops. Having captured some hundreds of tins of preserved meats they proceeded to lead their weapons with them and poured into the beleaguered fort a perfect deluge of beef, mutton and ox tongues.

THE QUAKER BUSINESS HEAD.

From the New York Press.

Few persons realise how many men of distinction in New York are Quakers. They make no show of their faith, but are devoted to Quaker customs. "Dear Sir," they never use, even in their business correspondence. "Friend" is the accepted term. They sign their letters "Thy Friend." One of the largest of the glassware houses in New York is composed almost exclusively of Quakers. In the correspondence in every department of this great concern—even in letters addressed to people abroad—it is the rule to use the Quaker form in opening and closing letters.

There are a fair number of Quakers in the Standard Oil. The man who was purchasing agent for that great corporation for more than twenty-five years was a Quaker. He never was known to lose his temper. He had the spending of more than $20,000,000 a year. Such a big purchasing agent had to be both diplomatic and just in his dealings with men. Never was this man's fairness questioned in all the years he was with this concern.

POLITE INQUIRY.

OUT of the smoke that covers me,
Black as the bottom of the pit,
I ask someone to kindly see
If so the Wednesday Club has quit.

Has it gone in for equal rights,
Or some new-fangled woman's cause,
That all the days are like the nights,
And no one ever keeps the laws?

I would not whimper nor complain,
Though I should never see the skies,
If I could only hear again
The music of its battle cries.

I care not what I have endured,
Nor what disheartens for a day,
So long as I am well assured
The club is hammering away.

Beelzebub and all his kin
Find and shall find me unafraid,
But I do not, somehow, hear the din
The women formerly have made.

SOLVING THE DOG PROBLEM.

The possibility of getting some return for feeding a dog has appealed to many an old woman as a telephone girl. For even ever since the first wolf was made captive. The St. Bernard has been extensively used for rescuing wayfarers from the snow. The shepherd has tended the master's sheep. The hunter has used the dog in the chase. The Indian has eaten him. The Eskimo has driven him to a sled. There are dog police. There are watch dogs. Bloodhounds have followed the trails of criminals. Farm dogs have acquired the art of holding hogs by the ears. The vivisectionist has raided the dog pound.

But notwithstanding this wide range of utility, the average dog has remained a burden, and the dog problem may be said to be about what it has been for thousands of years. It is only within the last few days that dogs have demonstrated their ability to justify themselves in the commonplaces of general industry. Mr. H. P. Allen of Stanberry, Mo., has a dog which husks corn. Going into the field like any farm hand, it takes its corn row, pulls down the ears, strips off the husk, and piles up the fruits of the earth with the neatness and dispatch of a hired man making $1.50 a day. Mr. Allen avers that this is so, and his neighbors attest to it. Nor is this all. Mr. H. J. C. Beckemeyer, living near Carlyle, Ill., has a dog which gathers pecans. It takes a basket out under a pecan tree, rustles pecans among the dead leaves and fills the basket. Both these gentlemen say their dogs are swift and tireless. The Allen dog can husk as much corn as a man and the Beckemeyer dog can put three pecans in the basket while a good active boy is finding one.

This is well. We have borne with dogs a long time.

Don't You Feel Foolish?

Probably very few people understand the expression "Comin' Through the Rye." There is in Scotland a small stream called the Rye. The girls forded it going to church, school and to market and as the water was a foot or two deep, they had to hold their skirts up. The boys would meet them in midstream and kiss them without any difficulty, as the girls couldn't drop their skirts to make any resistance. That's what the poet meant when he wrote: "Comin' Thro the Rye," but most people think he meant a field of rye.—Holton Signal.

The Editor's Romance.

If a man is really looking for a wife instead of a social butterfly, heiress or a chorus girl, we heartily recommend for his consideration a telephone girl. For even temper, patience, promptness and meekness, telephone girls have the world beaten. They are girls with practical ideas and common sense; they are girls who will help you save your money and make you an allround housewife. We have never seen one that wasn't neat and clean, and they would very probably be the most orderly housekeepers you could get, and one of their greatest virtues is their ability to control their tongues. They are accustomed to being quarreled at and bemeaned, yet they are not moved to an outburst thereby. We know they are sometimes imposed upon and are seldom rated at their real worth. If you are in need of a wife, get a telephone girl.—Monroe City (Mo.) News.

LETTER TO SANTY.

Dear Santa Claus: My coal bill
Is ninety twenty-four.
If you will take it off my hands,
I shall not ask for more.
I don't care how you fix it,
Just so you let me out—
O, that would be a Christmas gift
Beyond a doubt.

Dear Santa Claus, my grocer
Wants money very badly.
If you will see him when you come,
I'll leave it to you gladly.
I don't care what you give him,
Just so the trade is fair—
O, that would be a Christmas gift
Beyond compare.

Dear Santa Claus, my butcher—
But do I grow prolix?
What say I send them all to you,
With leave for you to fix?
I don't care how you fix them,
So long as they are paid—
But I expect too much of you,
I am afraid.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

JACQUER.—Liquid facial soap: Four ounces tincture of green soap, 4½ ounces distilled witch hazel; mix; apply every second day and wash off immediately with hot water.

R. B. O.—Pimples should be treated from within. Keep the system in good condition. Wash the face once a day with good soap; shaving soap is sure to do good. Rinse off all soap.

SHAMPOO.—Egg shampoo: Vigorous beating of an egg to which a gill of water is added. Rub this mixture on the scalp, parting the hair here and there, and massaging for several minutes. Then wash the hair and scalp with several successive tepid waters, and a last rinse of colder temperature.

M. M. A.—Complexion naturally dark cannot be changed. For clear complexion: Pure olive oil, teaspoonful or tablespoonful half hour after meals; lemonade an hour before breakfast; exercise in open air; fruits in morning. Spinach, lettuce, string beans, beats, carrots, celery, young onions are recommended. Avoid pastry, tea, coffee. Drink water freely between meals. Never overeat.

MRS. SCHUSTER.—Of switch dyeing, a beauty says: Pour one quart boiling water over two level teaspoons green tea. Let stand about 20 minutes and strain through a cloth. Then add to the liquid a small portion of copperas, no larger than a pea. Dip the switch in clear water, let drip, and then dip in the tea solution; press as dry as possible and let dry. If not dark enough, continue the process till the desired shade is obtained. This solution is much stronger than you would suppose, so test strength of dye by dipping a small lock of the hair clipped from switch. If too strong, weaken with water. My hair is the shade called "ash blonde," a shade very difficult to obtain, but I am delighted with results. If you have failed with other preparations, place the supposed ruined switch in equal parts peroxide of hydrogen and hot water. Let stand for a day and dry. Continue this treatment till the hair is several shades lighter than required. Then give it the tea preparation till dark enough. I tested this with gratifying results. (Questions should always be addressed "Answers.")

HEALTH HINTS.

MRS. L. W.—A physician says: Tubercular glands are easily cured; that is, the tubercular areas become walled in and incapable of doing harm. Usually the process can be arrested before there is much breaking down of tissue or formation of pus. Sometimes the glands become abscesses and must be drained. Suppurating tubercular glands is the disease which formerly was called scrofula, and before that was known as king's evil. Occasionally tubercular glands must be dissected out by an elaborate operation. Methods of treatment have greatly reduced the number of cases requiring this more radical operation. The lungs are sometimes infected from tubercular glands. Change of climate is seldom necessary in glandular tuberculosis.

LAW POINTS.

Mrs. J. H. B.—Merchant's license is necessary for selling home-baked goods—$6.34.

WEDNESDAY.—If you accepted job subject to the rules of the firm, you are bound thereby and the docking you got would be lawful.

R. I. X.—The contract is not broken by the company accepting the $6 you mention; if sale should bring less than balance you owe, you are liable and they can garnish.

ANXIOUS.—You cannot demand interest on your legacy under the circumstances; see Judge of Probate Court. From what you say, the final settlement comes in December, 1912 term of court, and if you fail to receive your legacy by January see Judge of Court in person and at same time mention remark of administrator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A. B. S.—No bridge across the Mississippi at New Orleans.

E. R. H.—L. A. Lathrop is U. S. Consul at Cardiff, Wales.

I. T. D.—In your answer of the 6th for "married people" read "musical people."

MANNE.—Try writing Crawford Film Co., St. Louis, for the posing information.

A.—We have no address of syndicate for humorous verses, paragraphs, etc.

ANXIOUS.—Try Anti-Saloon League, Syndicate Building, 10th and Olive, for prohibition literature.

GRATEFUL.—Indian Territory is now part of Oklahoma. States 46, territories 3. Secretary of the Treasury, Franklin MacVeagh. No recent Cabinet changes.

C. & J.—Only an examination at the recruiting station would determine the question as to whether you would be rejected on account of a slight deformity of the legs.

CLUBS.—Since the formation of the Republican party in 1856 the Democrats have controlled the House 9 times, Senate 4 times. Both houses, twice. In 62d Congress there are 40 Republican senators, 32 Democrats; House, Republicans 214, Democrats 175.

W. J. T.—Ingersoll was an agnostic rather than an atheist. He "did not know," and demanded evidence though there is no record of his having made any thorough search for it outside of the Bible. He died as he had lived, sending for no minister. Mrs. Ingersoll never repudiated her husband's opinion and never joined a church. A Jesuit writer gives these definitions: The atheist does not believe in God; the pagan adores several gods; the deist believes in one God but rejects a particular Providence; the free-thinker presumes to serve God according to his fancy, without being attached to any religion; the philosopher takes reason and not revelation for the rule of his belief; the gentile never having regarded the Jewish people as a chosen nation, does not believe God promised them a Messiah; the Jew refuses to adore the Messiah in the person of Christ.

UNINFORMED.—U. S. postal savings bank, 9th and Olive branch postoffice. The rate of interest on postal savings deposits is 2 per cent annually, or 42 on each $100 deposited. The money must remain on deposit a year to draw interest. If withdrawn in less than a year, interest is forfeited. United States bonds, bearing 2½ per cent annual interest in sums of $50 and upward, are issued for sale through the postal savings banks. We do not advise as to investments, except that there should be thorough investigation. Customary charges by real estate firms in selling property and making loans, 2½ per cent. Charge for rent collections vary from 5 per cent down; for instance, low-class tenements, 5 per cent; more desirable class, 3 per cent, and so forth; then again reductions are made when collections amount to a considerable sum and scaled down a notch or two when thousands are collected. (Answers await their turn.)

LIN YED.—In Great Britain a billion is a million of millions; as many millions as there are units in a million (1,000,000,000,000). In France and the United States a thousand millions (1,000,000,000). The word "billion" was introduced into French in the 16th century, in the sense of a million to the second power, as a million was a million to the third power. At that time numbers were usually pointed off in periods of six figures. In the 17th century the custom prevailed of pointing off numbers in periods of three and this led to the change in the meaning of the word "billion" in French. The word "billion" and "trillion," etc., did not apparently come into use in English until a later date. Locke ("Essay on the Human Understanding") speaks of the use of "billion" as a novelty. The English meaning of the word is thus the original and more systematic. The word "billion" is not used in the French of everyday life, one thousand millions being called a "milliard."

The Post-Dispatch Daily Short Story

The Coward.

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR.

A LONELY, homeless man paused in front of a new bank building and watched the crowds enter and depart with a token of dull interest in his weary eyes. Men and women, young ladies and little children, all chattering and happy, passed by the desks and counters loaded with a small fortune in carnations and roses.

"Opening day"—"new bank"—"giving souvenirs," fell upon the ears of the friendless man. Without persuasion or motive, simply influenced by the general swaying movement of the throng, he found himself one of a long line. As his turn came to face a counter, he was handed out a beautiful rose in full bloom with a long stem.

"Married?" was all the floral distributor had asked. The man had nodded sadly. "Any children?" he was asked as he passed a second counter. The man gave a start as if waking up, and a pretty picture book was handed him. Carrying both in a half dazed way, he crossed the street, sat down on a doorstep, and, his eyes fixed on the two souvenirs, he seemed to lapse into a profound day dream.

If any person had asked this man as to his identity, he would have said, "I am The Coward." For two years in his own humble and distracted mind that opinion he had not only expressed, but in deep self abnegation he had verily believed it. Now he was bearded, bronzed, and bore the marks of weather, climate and toil. Twenty-four months previously he had been John Dunbar, inventor, in this same town, a delicate, sensitive man, impracticable as to business, devoting his life to the completion of an invention that had been its one dream.

Working on the perfection of his model and then waiting for capital, knowing only how to think and not to work, his resources had dwindled away, and his father-in-law, Judge Graham, stern and merciless, had come to him one day.

"Seemed to lapse into a profound day dream."

"Give up your idle dreaming and go to work like a man," he had said. "If you don't there will be a home for my daughter and her child, little Ruth, with me, but you must shift for yourself."

There were no reproaches from gentle, loving Ethel, his wife, but the inventor sought work. Unskilled, wage and position offered were to him degrading. He wrote a brief note to his wife.

"Go home to your father," it ran. "I have given up my dream, I must give up you and the child. Your father can have the patent. I cannot face humiliation and defeat among my equals. I am a coward."

John Dunbar had heard of a wonderful silver mine in Mexico. He went there, worked like a peon and at the end of a year hired an overseer to send his earnings to his wife. Later he found that they had never reached her. He worked a second year. The mine was flooded. With a bare $300 he escaped with his life. He started for home. On the way he was robbed of his little earnings, and now he had landed in his native town—a pauper.

"All that I have in the world," he said bitterly, regarding the two bank souvenirs—"two years' exile, and these! —Why not?"

A sudden resolution had seized him. He smiled at the quaint conceit in his mind. It fortified him to resist the impulses of utter despair. Unrecognized and as a stranger he threaded old familiar thoroughfares, finally reaching the last home he had known.

An inquiry conveyed to him that strangers occupied the house. The Dunbars? The husband had gone away, the wife and child had moved to her father's home. The Judge had died a year since. Mrs. Dunbar was living at such and such a place.

It was almost dusk when the refugee reached a neat cottage set in the midst of a rare garden. Its seclusion and peace cast a healing calm over his troubled soul. He came to an open door, sank to a step, and bent his ear, profoundly attentive.

The bright chatter of a little child mingled with the soft tones of an elder. John Dunbar arose to his feet. He could trace the fact that the mother and daughter were busy about the kitchen, preparing the evening meal.

It was a night of strange emotions and impulses for the forlorn wayfarer. The door at which he stood opened into the neat, cheerful dining room. The table was set for three. He wondered at that. Softly, on tiptoe, he advanced into the apartment. Beside the plate at the head of the table John Dunbar placed the rose. At the tiny tray near to a child's familiar high chair he laid the little picture book. Then he retreated again to the porch, and drew far back into its shadows, for mother and child had entered the room.

"Oh, mamma, look! look!" cried the little one eagerly, taking up the book.

Ethel Dunbar was dressed in mourning. The soul of the ardent gazer came into his eyes as he thought she had never looked so beautiful. She had taken up the rose in mingled surprise and pleasure.

"Who brought them, mamma, and why?" asked little Ruth. "Oh, how pretty."

"It must have been some neighbor, dearie," said her mother in a dreamy tone, "some neighbor who knew."

"Who knew what, mamma?" pressed the curious little one.

"It is just two years tonight since your dear father was lost to us," said the mother, and her voice died away in a low sob.

"Won't he ever come back again, mamma?" asked Ruth.

"We will hope and pray for it, my child," answered Ethel. "Always his place shall be ready for him. Oh, my lost one, my cherished one!" she cried out, unable to stem the wild surging longing in her heart. "Where are you wandering tonight?"

Ethel had broken down utterly. In her pretty way the child was trying to comfort her. Thus distracted, it was the opportunity for the weary soul at the threshold. John Dunbar stole into the room and seated himself at the table.

"Ethel—my child!" he said, like one in a daze. "I am here. I have come back empty-handed. Only the rose, the poor little picture book—"

Loving arms were about him, tiny hands holding his bronzed own and kissing them, and a voice of rare tenderness was saying: "You have brought yourself—it is all we ask, all we need. My husband, oh, my husband!"

When John Dunbar learned later on that the little cottage was called "Heart's Content," he did not marvel. When his loving wife told him a most wonderful story, he only smiled. No riches could make his cup of joy the more complete, yet a competence, almost wealth, had been waiting for him.

The patent had been placed in practical hands by Ethel after her father died. She was now receiving a liberal royalty upon it. The factory employing it needed just such a man as the inventor.

So "The Coward," who had shrunk from his fellows like a wounded bird, came into his own. Such gentle souls are for the world to cherish. Fortune came and fame, but not to warp that noble nature. In deeds of friendly kindness, in sacrifice and thoughtfulness for others, hand in hand, husband and wife trod a path of roses, made so because their gentle deeds glorified the lives of all about them in an atmosphere of perfect love.

Twenty-eight eggs.

A WIFE AND HER JOB

Which Is Better Fitted for Matrimony, the Home Girl or the Trained Wage Earner?

Advantages which the working girl now has emphasized by a writer for the Post-Dispatch.

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

IS a girl trained and maintained at home until she marries better fixed for wifehood than her sister who goes forth to earn a living and is brought thereby in contact with the serious problems of life? A young woman reader in Arkansas raised this point in a letter. She expressed the belief that girls who earn their own living benefit their parents but not themselves, and devote, to pulling telephone plugs, hammering typewriter keys or making change in shops and restaurants, time which should be given to preparing themselves for wifehood.

In my opinion, this reader's conclusions are absolutely wrong.

In the first place, even if these young women worked outside the home from choice instead of from absolute necessity, as is generally the case, they would be doing far better for themselves, their future husbands and children than if they remained in parasitic dependence upon their families. Housekeeping a hundred years ago was a complicated art. But with all the simplifications which it has undergone since our great-grandmother's time, the care and management of a home can be learned by any intelligent child in a few months. And childhood is the time in which it should be learned.

Cooking and sewing are taught in the public schools. In the high schools a girl may learn everything it will be needful for her to know as a wife—from how to use the "left overs" from Sunday dinner to the right way to bathe the baby. And she has leisure and opportunity to apply what she learns at school in her own home.

If her mother can teach her those things, so much the better. But she is no longer dependent upon her mother's knowledge. What the mother lacks the public school supplies.

A GIRL HAS A CHANCE TO STANDARDIZE HERSELF.

NOW she has the chance to acquire the essential equipment for a possible future job as a wife before she is 16 years of age. From that time until she marries she cannot do better for herself and for her future than to find out what in terms of money she is worth to the world and to herself.

The girl who stays at home never gets this definite perspective on her economic value. What is the worth? Whatever she can get from her father—later from her husband—for more or less intangible services. And she has the overwhelming advantage of being able to refuse to marry for a support.

Many times, of course, the self-supporting woman does marry from the same mixture of motives that may take the stay-at-home girl to the altar. Perhaps she gets tired or disheartened by the struggle. Perhaps she yearns for shelter and protection and is willing to do without love to obtain them. But at any rate she has a choice.

The girl who stays at home until she marries is in the very trying position of being fitted or of aspiring to a job she cant' seek at all, which she must pretend she doesn't want and has never thought of until it goes out of the way to seek her.

She cannot openly look for work as a wife—the occupation for which she is trained. Indirectly, by arts, wiles, snares, etc., she may induce some young man to give her a job as wife But she can't say openly that she is looking for that position and produce her cooking school diploma, etc., to prove her qualifications. She can't propose.

She never will be able to propose, she never should be able to propose, because woman's passive part in courtship is physiological and basic. Unlike her political handicaps, it results not from the law of man but from the law of nature.

THE BUTTERFLY ALWAYS GETS THE JOB

YOUNG WOMEN BEGINNING TO SEE "WHERE THEY ARE AT."

MORE and more young women are realizing the foolish ambiguity of the position they occupy if their time is unemployed during the seven years between graduation and marriage. More and more of them are seeking to establish their economic value through work.

The greater number of employed women, of course, work for the same reason, because they have to to work in order to live. But whatever the impetus of their occupation, its definiteness and independence give them a value and a dignity as human beings that cannot possibly belong to the parasitic daughter, however charming and accomplished she may be.

TEMPERAMENT IS EMOTIONAL MEMORY

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By. DAVID BELASCO.

The playwright producer of "Woman" lays great stress on temperament. During a "Woman" rehersal he gave the following explanation:

DAVID BELASCO

"I SHOULD say that temperament is feeling tempered and controlled by reflection. And that it involves a possession of what, for want of a better term, I shall call an emotional memory. And this emotional memory I can best define by saying that it bears the same relation to the dramatist's art that a musical memory does to that of a musician, for however much feeling one may possess on an occasion, unless one has the ability to summon the memory of this feeling or emotion at such time as it is necessary to reproduce it, it avails not. This ability the woman of temperament has to an almost unlimited degree, and unless she has it she ought in justice to herself to say nothing of the public at large, keep off the stage.

For temperament, and temperament in large abundance, is the prime requisite of the most successful dramatic artist. If one be ever so richly endowed with youth, beauty, talent and industry, and temperament is lacking, all the other qualifications shall avail nothing beyond certain narrow limitations.

If I could only impress that fact upon the hundreds of young women who in the course of the year importune me for an opportunity of embarking on a stage career. Youth, beauty and talent many of these young women have in a large degree. Many—very many—have also inordinate capacity for hard work.

All of which is very good indeed. For industry is, of course, a most important factor in the success of the young dramatic aspirant, just as it is in every other department of life; but I would like to say right here that we have in America a certain tendency to overestimate the importance of industry. We have made a fetich of it. People who have succeeded in any walk of life whatsoever are prone to explain their success to the multitude—perhaps solely—attributive to hard work. Such an explanation does credit more to their modesty than it does to their common sense.

Love and Courtesy

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By BETTY VINCENT.

FRANKNESS is always the best policy, either between lovers or between friends. Misunderstanding and estrangement are weeds which grow best in silence and concealment.

If you've heard somthing that troubles and puzzles you about a person whom you love, the very best thing for you to do is to go to your friend and ask for an explanation. Personally, I am firmly convinced that even an unpleasant certainty is worse than an unpleasant doubt. And in so many cases the explanation will result pleasantly.

If you feel confident that you no longer love the person you have promised to marry, tell him so at once and get it over. The longer you wait the worse it will be for both.

And finally, young man, if you want a girl to be your wife open your heart to her with the frank request.

No Harm Asking Mother.

L. S. writes: "When you ask a girl to go out with you, must you also ask her mother's permission?"

There are different customs in different classes of society. Follow the etiquette generally obtaining in yours.

Sauce for the Goose.

E. W. writes: "If a young man goes out with several different girls ought he object if one girl to whom he pays attention has other young men friends?"

Certainly not.

In Bad Taste.

L. W. writes: "A man friend has asked for my picture several times. Would it be all right to suggest that we have a picture taken together?"

It would be very bad taste. If you want his picture, tell him you will exchange with him.

After the Theater.

D. N. writes: "After the theater is it proper to take a girl to supper?"

Certainly.

She Is Right.

B. K. writes: "I cannot marry for three years, and she declines a long engagement, although she admits she loves me. She wishes us simply to be good friends. Am I right in following her wishes?"

I don't see what else you can do, unless you wish to give her up altogether.

Only Engagement Ring.

A. R. writes: "I have seen a girl only twice, but we have exchanged many letters. Would it be proper for me to ask her parents to allow me to give her a ring?"

Not unless you mean it as an engagement ring, and I don't think you're well enough acquainted with the girl to go that far.

Votes for Women Contest Closes Today

Prizes Will Be Awarded Next Week

Votes-for-Women Editor, Post-Dispatch.

IT seems strange that in speaking of votes for women the general trend is that the home is going to the dogs. Now, why in the world should this be? Father goes to vote. He takes a flying trip to the polls, squeezes his way in, votes, goes to work or office, takes a joy ride with friends, talks about who will be it, and gets home on time, right side up. But, if mother goes—First, the home is neglected, the children are crying for food, everybody's socks worry holes in them and everything crys for attention, or cleaning up. The canary dies and the cat kills the neighbor's chickens. I say no. Mother can start father out, get the children to school with lunch packed, tidy the house, prepare supper on fireless cooker, buy some shirts and collars for pa, cast her vote, have an ice cream sundae, also bring something nice for dessert. And so can every daughter who is self-supporting do as well.

Pa says he don't get a show at the polls, ma and the girls will help him.

Votes-for-Women Editor, Post-Dispatch:

Women should be allowed to vote because she has proved herself man's equal mentally and therefore competent to vote intelligently. Man has no vocation requiring intelligence, craft or executive ability in which woman has not acquitted herself creditably. Even to aviation and the ruling of a kingdom, the "weaker sex" has "made good." So why should so small a privilege as the right to vote be denied her?

GRACE JOBE, 714 Converse avenue,

Votes-for-Women Editor, Post-Dispatch:

Should women vote? No, never! We are trying to keep the women pure and modest. Why put them before the public? Married women should trust their husbands with their ideas on voting and the single woman has all she can do to look after herself. No woman can keep a secret. Keep her out of politics.

Now hear the rhymsters juggle
This unpoetic theme,
The woman's franchise struggle
And votes-for-women dream.

Our reasons are quite valid;
We're pining to be free,
Though we can mix a salad
Or brew a cup of tea.

For freedom we are pining
And seeking higher goals;
Our influence refining
Is needed at the polls.

And we can cast a ballot
As well as any man,
Or wield official mallet
E'en as our brothers can.

Our freedom's sun is shining,
So, while we bake and brew,
Our reasons we're defining
To make our dream come true.

Votes for all intelligent, clean, healthy women and men are coming, but not under woman's present line of attack.

It takes a powerful lot of force to move a crowd, even make a dent in it, but work on the individual, and see it dissolve as though it were a shadow, or grow like magic from the nowhere and the everywhere.

Let those "ranting noisy suffragettes" turn noise into calm, gentle, quiet "action" among the men of their own households—and lo, and behold, they will find it as easy as "falling off a mossy log," and forever after wonder why they could possibly have thought the task impossible or even difficult.

Let her vote, no true woman will abuse the privilege by neglecting her home. How many can attribute success and perfection, whether it be mental, moral or physical, to the guidance of woman. It may have been the mother in the home, or the teacher in the school room. She is capable, let her vote, and let us unite our sentiments with those of the poet who wrote:

They talk about a woman's sphere
As though it had a limit,
There's not a life or death or birth,
That has a feather's weight or worth,
Without a woman in it.

S. MELLON.

Votes-for-Women Editor, Post-Dispatch:

Women should vote because:

Votes are the only means to secure justice in a democracy.

Objecting to equal suffrage is objecting to Democracy.

Thinking women are as numerous as thinking men.

Equality at the polls means better conditions for both men and women.

Sex is a biological distinction, not a political one.

Freedom to a voice in government is due every citizen

Of a republic like ours where every one is subject to law

Regardless of race, creed, color or sex.

Woman shares the responsibity in every phase of life.

Open the political field to her and she will be a co-worker there.

Make the polls a fit place for women and politcs will be fit for both men and women.

Equal rights will not make a man of a woman.

Neither will voting keep her from cooking the dinner while she considers the candidate.

Women should not vote. All true, home-loving women should be satisfied to perform the duties which God gave unto them, the duty of wives and mothers and the care of the home, a good mother, good home training in all homes would do far more toward righting the many evils than will ever be accomplished by giving women the right to vote. By REX MAGEE.

Special Representative of the Post-Dispatch at Columbia, Mo.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 7.—That Washington University is to have a busy track, football and basket-ball season was evident after the meeting of the Missouri Valley Conference representatives here yesterday. It was announced that Dr. Frank H. Ewerhardt and Coach Frank Cayou of the St. Louis institution had been successful in landing the Missouri Valley track and field championship meet for the Stadium. It will be held May 31.

Four instead of two conference football games will be played by the Pikeway institution. The Drake game is scheduled Nov. 1 at Des Moines while the Tigers will call on Washington in St. Louis, Nov. 15. Kansas and Ames will be scheduled but the dates haven't been selected. Shurtleff, Rolla, Westminster and Drury are expected to be booked also.

Piker Athletes Busy.

An interesting schedule is also provided for the track and field athletes. Aside from competing in the conference meet, the team will meet Drake in a dual set of games at Des Moines at a date to be picked later. The Pikeway squad will also be entered in the Missouri Athletic Club's indoor meet, March 15 and also in the Drake relay carnival, April 19.

An interpretation of the basket-ball rules was also adopted by the conference. While the faculty representatives were in session, the coaches held a meeting and fixed the schedules in the different branches of sport. Coach Cayou of Washington was named secretary and Chester Brewer of Missouri chairman of this gathering.

It was also decided to admit the Kansas Agricultural College to membership in the conference, raising the total of members to seven. The Kansas Aggies replace Iowa, which dropped out several years ago. The membership of the Kansas Aggies becomes effective next fall.

The awarding of the track meet to Washington University is a victory for the Southern colleges in the conference. In four years the event has been held in Des Moines and a change was desired. The athletic directors present were Francis M. Cayou, Washington; W. O. Hamilton, Kansas; E. O. Stiehm, Nebraska; J. T. Griffith, Drake; Clyde Williams, Ames and C. L. Vrewere, Missouri. The faculty representatives were: C. L. Waldo, Washington; W. G. Manly, Missouri; R. G. Kapp, Nebraska; E. T. Murray, Kansas; D. W. Morehouse, Drake; S. W. Beyer, Ames. Mr. Beyer was selected as the conference delegate to the National Collegiate Association to be held in New York Dec. 27.

BEN HOGE TO CAPTAIN CADET FOOTBALL ELEVEN

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 7.—The Army selected as its football captain for 1913, Benjamin F. Hoge, who has played left end for three years. Hoge is a member of the second class and was one of the Army's best ends a year ago, showing remarkable form during that season. Because of his weight, he had some trouble in filling the position during the season just closed and his chief competitor, Merrillat, was selected at the last moment by the coaches to start against the Navy last week. Before the game was over Hoge had succeeded him.

ST. LOUIS TENPINNERS SHOOT IN KAW TOURNEY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 7.—A big program in singles and doubles, with more than 100 men representing South Omaha, Pueblo and Kansas City on the alleys was scheduled for today in the Middle West bowling tournament.

Thirteen teams from Omaha, Chicago, St. Louis, St. Joseph and Excelsior Springs, Mo., will roll in the five-men event tonight.

Eleven Five Wins Opener.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The University of Chicago basket ball team was victor over Armour Institute in its first game of the season last night, 18 to 7. Morgren and Dan Jardon of the football squad were the stars of the game.

Dixon Must Make Weight for J. Kilbane

Or Forfeit $250 to the Title Holder

Kansas City Scrapper Is Due Sunday

Rivalry Between 122-Pound Stars Is Expected to Result in Great Contest at the Future City Athletic Club Thursday, Dec. 12.

By CLARENCE F. LLOYD.

Tommy Dixon, the Kansas City featherweight, is due in St. Louis Sunday, to finish his training for the eight-round bout with Johnny Kilbane, the 122-pound champion, at the Future City Athletic Club next Thursday evening.

Dixon believes he can defeat the champion. Since last July 4 he has been waiting for the present match. On that date, he met Kilbane in a 12-round bout in the title holder's home, Cleveland. Many awarded the edge to Dixon, although Kilbane claims that he toyed with the Kansas Cityan. At any rate, Dixon has clamored for a return match over a longer route to prove his superiority.

They will not go a distance here, but Dixon is glad of the opportunity to again show against the king of the feathers. He has agreed to make 122 pounds at 7 o'clock and failure to do so will cost him $250, the money already having been posted.

There is considerable rivalry between the featherweights, inasmuch as each has said a lot of unkind things about the other since the July 4 encounter. Each is eager to score a victory via the knockout route to end the dispute about their ability and they will lose little time in getting into action, once the bell taps Thursday.

McGovern-Kirk Bout Watched.

Harry Trendall and Leo Kelly finally met, and now why not Oliver Kirk and Benny McGovern?

They were former teammates as amateurs while wearing the cherry diamond and boxing at the Missouri Athletic Club. At that time, however, Benjamin was a banty and never was asked to mix with Kirk. The latter, as now, was a featherweight when performing as a simon pure.

Kirk has mowed down all the opponents he has been sent against since turning professional. The same must be said of McGovern this season, although his foes have not been as high caliber boxers as those Kirk has met. But it has never been proven just how good McGovern is. He ran against a snag in Bobby Robidou, the dancer, earlier in the season, but came back and beat the olive-hued artist.

No two boxers appearing in St. Louis are more popular than Kirk and McGovern. They represent the clean cut type of athlete, and each has a large following. That some promoter has not cinched this match ere this is puzzling.

Kirk Would Be Favorite.

Should such a contest be staged, Kirk would undoubtedly rule a favorite. His experience against better and heavier boys would probably make him the winner. But a defeat at Kirk's hands would be no disgrace to McGovern. And there are dozens of the little Hibernian's friends who believe that Benny would outpoint the slender Oliver.

Kirk was eager to dispose of McGovern earlier in the season. He realized that a Kirk-McGovern bout would draw well and offered McGovern $350 as his end to go on Kirk to gamble with one of the local clubs for his bit of the gate. At that time, however, McGovern had just started his climb to fame and didn't care to take on Kirk. Now, however, McGovern knows what he can do, and would probably jump at a chance to meet Kirk if some promoter decides upon this match as a headliner.

Kirk will linger in St. Louis as long as the local clubs care to put him on as an attraction. If not, he plans to hit the road and take on all comers. He will not go to the Coast, however, as he believes the rush of pugdom's stars to that section will cause a shrinkage of purses.

"Will I take on Attell again?" Kirk repeated.

"Sure! But Kirk will do the dictating if there is to be a return match. Kirk will name the weight and also the portion of the purse he is to receive. And Attell will weigh in while I am looking on, too."

Kirk says that he bore no marks after his recent encounter with Attell. He slightly sprained his right wrist from bouncing it on the little Yiddisher's jaw. The member will be in working order for Kirk's bout with Battling Burke in Shreveport next Thursday.

The regular weekly boxing entertainment is scheduled at the Brewery Workars' club, Thirteenth street and Chouteau avenue, Sunday afternoon. Two bouts are on the program. They are: Joe Geiger vs. Charley Jackson, and "Battling" Smith vs. Willie Krug.

Young Carney, a featherweight, is prepared to meet any boy of his weight on short notice.

Harry Trendall has received an offer to meet Joe Thomas in New Orleans Dec. 16. He will probably accept the match, the weight to be 134 pounds and the distance 10 rounds.

Trendall is displeased with his failure to defeat Leo Kelly at the Coliseum Thursday evening. Trendall says he didn't use his right hand as much as he generally does inasmuch as he injured the member in the bout with Joe Sherman. Trendall wants another chance at the "Pride of Compton Hill."

Dinner Dance at Algonquin.

A dinner dance will be held at the Algonquin Golf Club for the benefit of the new members and their families Saturday evening. Announcement is also made that a smoker is on the program, Dec. 23.

Turner Teams Will Play.

The South St. Louis Turners' indoor baseball team plays the Concordia Turners at South St. Louis Turner Hall, Sunday afternoon.

Rifle Experts to Meet.

A meeting of the Missouri State Rifle Association is to be held at the First Regiment Armory Saturday evening.

TOMMY DIXON

Dixon is the first of the prominent Missouri featherweights to get a chance at the champion in St. Louis. Kirkwood, McGovern and Ollie Kirk are St. Louisans who are next in line.

ALL SURE THING BETS.

WHAT'S the use of fixing races, for the sake of a little sure thing money, when baseball offers some of the very best of chances for speculation? Here are a few propositions with a seeming chance to them, but which are nevertheless lead-pipes of the pipelest sort:

That Jack O'Connor's case against the St. Louis Browns will never reach the jury.

That the National League will not permit the Roger Bresnahan case to reach a civil court.

That, if by chance it should, Bresnahan will be given the verdict and a money award.

That the National League will fling in favor of Bresnahan.

That Bresnahan will NOT be blacklisted, if he should take the case to court.

That any case which threatens to prove an entering wedge to the vitals of organized baseball will be permitted to go to a jury.

The reasons?

Watch Sunday's Post-Dispatch for the reasons. There you will find in detail the analysis of the case by a competent expert, a lawyer and a specialist in baseball affairs.

• • •

ROGER'S CASE IMPORTANT.

BRESNAHAN'S case has a peculiar interest. Not only is the man of such personal character that he has hosts of friends throughout the official and unofficial baseball world, contributing to a keener interest in his future than would be true of almost any other player in the game, but the decision in the matter means everything to the baseball player, who is just now inaugurating a campaign for fairer treatment by club owners. One of his demands is the integrity of the contract on both sides, making it binding on both instead of merely on the hireling, as now.

PLAYERS' FUTURE INVOLVED.

Should the National League decide that Roger has no grievance it means that players and managers must henceforth expect continued breach of contractural obligations by clubs hiring them, without a show of redress except under threat of blacklist.

The Bresnahan case may evolve a result that will affect the organized game from coast to coast.

• • •

NO ARGUMENT HERE.

GOSSIP in the hot stove league Saturday concerned itself with the defense the St. Louis club might make at the coming hearing in New York, Monday.

One suggestion was that some of Roger's heated remarks might be used against him, as tending to show he had lost interest in his work. The particular remark referred to, uttered shortly after his deal with Cincinnati was blocked by Mrs. Britton, was as follows:

Hereafter I will have nothing to do with building up the club. • • • In the future she (Mrs. Britton) will have to make the trades. • • • I have done everything possible in my judgment to add strength to the St. Louis club, but have been overruled.

Bresnahan should worry!

Especially in view of that clause in his contract, of which the following is the substance:

The owners and officers of the club agree at all times to assist Bresnahan in carrying out his policies as manager of the team.

As his trades were overruled and his plans to build up the team according to his own judgment, balked, it seems that the club, not Bresnahan, might be the real violator of the contract.

• • •

NO BLACKLIST FOR ROGER.

ANOTHER point that makes Bresnahan's case the more secure: He will not be blacklisted, should he seek redress in court. This opinion is not a personal one. It comes from one of the highest authorities in baseball today. It means that the National League already knows enough of the Bresnahan case to be certain beforehand of practically what move it will make in the matter Monday.

Pinch Shooter Ca mer Saves Intercity Game

Pinch-Shooter E. V. Calmer of the St. Louis team of the Intercity League won from Leon Magnus of New York, 50 to 45, in the one hundred and fourteenth inning of Friday's three-cushion match at Peterson's Hall. Calmer was the third player to be injected into the game for St. Louis, Frank Peterson having been removed from the game with the score 30 to 20 against him, being succeeded by Arthur Broadhead. Broadhead slipped back a notch during his tenure of office and when he retired in favor of Calmer the tally stood 39 to 25 for Magnus.

Calmer played brilliantly from the start, making 22 points in 21 innings, an average of better than 1. His safety halted Magnus effectively. Calmer making 23 points while his opponent was tallying 6.

The high average for the winning side was .44 and the high run 4, while the losers' figures were .40 and 3.

The final game of the series will be played tonight. St. Louis has already won two games.

MISSOURI WOULD PLAY VANDERBILT MEN IN ST. LOUIS

Effort Being Made to Have Altered the Conference Rule Preventing Game.

TIGER TREASURY WEAK

Loss of Big Kansas City Turkey Day Receipts Heavy Handicap to Athletics.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 7.—The Missouri Valley Conference rule which forbids a football game being staged outside college towns is robbing Kansas City and St. Louis of two good intercollegiate football games every year. The passing of this rule took the annual Missouri-Kansas game from Kansas City and incidentally cut down the financial returns to the athletic department of the two colleges. Now this rule checks the plan of Chester L. Brewer, Missouri physical director, who has planned a game with Vanderbilt University. The expenses to Nashville to meet the Commodores or the expenses from Tennessee to Columbia for a game with the Tigers makes it impossible without putting the clash in St. Louis.

Coach Brewer said concerning the matter:

"I would like to have the present rule altered. If it were not for this regulation we could schedule this annual game with the biggest school in the South at St. Louis. Vanderbilt has expressed a willingness to do this. Such a game would do more to advertise Missouri than playing institutions like Drake and Ames."

This conference rule is likely to stay on for awhile. Kansas started the movement for the enforcement of the rule and at present it lies between the executives from Missouri and Kansas universities, the two institutions affected by the rule. Also this matter is not within the hands of physical directors and coaches, but in the hands of other faculty members. Kansas lines up strong for maintaining the present rule. Dr. A. Ross Hill, president of Missouri University and incidentally at the head of the body who determines this rule, is heartily in favor of keeping it in vogue. Drake, Ames and Washington are not interested in the matter and vote to aid the institutions interested. Nebraska's stand is somewhat doubtful.

Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska alumni and students have been bringing strong pressure to bear on the men who have this matter in charge. The Nebraska followers want a game in Omaha. The Missouri and Kansas supporters want the annual game in Kansas City. It is doubtful, however, whether the officials will consider the matter at all this season.

The admission of Kansas Agricultural College into this conference will likely be a subject of discussion. The entire schedule for the year will be made out.

DE ORO TO CHALLENGE HORGAN FOR CUE TITLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Alfredo de Oro, present pool champion, has decided to take another flyer at the national three-cushion title. Hearing that John Daly had forfeited his challenge money and would not play John Horgan of St. Louis, who now holds the Jordan Lambert medal, De Oro decided it was up to him to relieve Horgan of the honors.

Horgan now is in San Francisco, but De Oro may also go West for the big academy play and play Horgan for the title on the Coast.

SPORT SALAD

BY L. C. DAVIS.

IT NEVER COMES AGAIN.

There are gains for all our losses,
There are balms for all our pain;
But it saddens all our hearts
When the batting eye departs,
For it never comes again.

We are stronger, we are better
Under manhood's sterner reign,
'Til we stiffen up and limp;
Then we lose the "pep" and "gimp"
And it never comes again.

Our ginger has departed
And we sigh for it in vain;
When we get the "Charley horse"
Youth is winging on its course—
And it never comes again.

A DRAW.

The outlook wasn't brilliant for the "Pride of Kerry Patch."
It was plain to all beholders he was worsted in the match;
'Til in the final session he went to it with a will
And earned a draw decision with the "Pride of Compton Hill."

The amateur question, in billiards, adjusts itself automatically to suit the prevailing conditions. When you're playing for money, you're a professional. When you're not playing for money you're an amateur.

Wolgast After Mandot, Ritchie and Joe Rivers

Former Champion Says He Will Start Campaign to Recover Title Feb. 22.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 7.—"Joke" snorted Ad Wolgast as he read in a newspaper that one Frankie Gage has challenged him to a fight.

"Before I get down to the Frankie Gages I will quit and go back to my farm. As a matter of fact, I am not crazy to go on fighting. It wouldn't worry me a bit if I never got the championship back.

"My record is one that I am willing to stand on. I was lightweight champion longer than anyone who ever before held that title. I fought at least twenty times in defense of the championship. I am not going to fight anyone before Feb. 22 as my hands are in very bad shape. I fractured two bones in my left hand on Willie Ritchie, and my right hand, which I broke in the training camp before the Rivers fight, hurts me all the time.

"After the fight Tuesday night between Flynn and McCarty I am going north to look over my Oregon land. Then I am going back to Cadillac to my farm.

"There are three fighters I would be willing to meet. I would like to fight Rivers Feb. 22 out here. Ritchie says that he will fight me July 4 again for the championship. That date suits me. I am willing to fight Joe Mandot in New Orleans any time after Feb. 22."

NEW ENGLAND SOCCER ELEVEN TO PLAY HERE

The Howard-Bullough soccer team of Pawtucket, R. I., regarded as one of the best association football machines in the country, will call for three games in St. Louis Jan. 1-4-5. The team will oppose the elevens which occupy the best positions in the St. Louis Soccer League race at that time, the contests to be staged at Athletic Park.

The Howard-Bulloughs humiliated the St. Leos on the latter team's trip East last spring. At the Hilltop Park in New York the New Englanders won by the lopsided score of 7 to 1. They are willing to wager that they can again beat the St. Leos.

Aside from the Howard-Bulloughs, local soccer fans will have a chance to see another Eastern eleven in action during the holidays, when the West Hudsons of Newark, N. J., come for three games.

C. B. C. TEAM TO START COURT SEASON TONIGHT

The Christian Brothers' College basket-ball team goes to Lebanon, Ill., Saturday evening to play the McKendree College team at that place. Capt. Riga, Elder, Brown, Ahlstrom and Goetzman will line up for the purple and gold team.

As a preliminary warm-up to the game, the Easton avenue five took on the Castlewood basket-ball five in the C. B. C. gym Friday night, and won with ease, 54—3. It was the first game of the season for the Brothers, the team having been together only four days.

GRIDIRON GOSSIP.

Wisconsin football fans mourn the loss of Germany Schultz, former all-America tackle, who has coached the Badger line for the past three years. Schultz has quit football for good. He's going into the automobile business in Fort Wayne, Ind. He won fame at Michigan.

Gilchrist, the Navy end, who was named by many experts on the all-America eleven this year, got his start at Rolla School of Mines. Like John P. Dalton, who won his first fame at C. B. C., Gilchrist made good from the start at Annapolis. He was a tower of strength to the middies in the big battle with the Army.

Only a dozen Harvard players have been able to score a touchdown against Yale in the long football struggle between America's two greatest universities. Bob Storer and Charley Brickley achieved the feat the past year. Other successful Crimson men were: Bert Holden, '88; C. A. Porter, '87; Dudley Dean and James Lee, '90; J. J. Hayes, '94; Bill Reid and Ben Dibblee, '98; Crawford Blagdon, A. W. Ristine and Tom Graydon, '01.

The loss of Johnny Magner and Von Tress, the speedy halfbacks, is a severe blow to C. B. C. Von Tress has quit school for good and will hie away to New Orleans, where he intends to make his home in the future. Magner has finished with football for all time, having played four years on intercollegiate teams.

Football experts rank the Eastern elevens in the following order: Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Penn State, Dartmouth, Carlisle, Penn. U., Lehigh, Brown and Swarthmore. This is the first time in years that Penn has fallen so low, and likewise the first time in many moons that Cornell hasn't been rated among the first ten.

MAROON STUDENTS WANT MICHIGAN IN BIG NINE

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The vote being taken among the students of the University of Chicago, on the subject of the return to the conference of the University of Michigan, last night, showed a total of 546 ballots in favor of the proposition and 21 against it.

Most of the undergraduate men have cast their votes on the question and a great many of the girl students have also voted.

A great number of those voting against the return of Michigan, it is said, based their objection on the supposed fact that the university did not want to return to the conference.

Noted Sire Is Dead.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 7.—Kingston, noted race horse and sire, died yesterday at Castleton. He was 28 years old and was bred by James R. Keene. Dwyer Brothers bought him for $12,000, and it is said that the horse earned more than $100,000 in stakes and purses during his nine years on the track. Kingston started 128 times, won 80 races, and was unplaced only four times.

New Home for Oakland Team.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—A new baseball park to cost about $150,000 will be completed by the Oakland Baseball Association, owners of the Oakland Coast League baseball team, in time for the beginning of the 1915 season, according to plans announced yesterday. Provision will be made to seat 30,000 spectators.

"Butcher Town" Contributes Two New Ball Stars

St. Louis Boys, "Dee" Walsh and "Lefty" High Advance to the Big Leagues.

"LEFTY" HIGH

DEE WALSH.

"Butcher Town" may boast another pair of big League performers next season. That section of St. Louis which has turned out so many baseball players will next season give to the American League, among others, Lester, "Dee" Walsh and Hugh "Lefty" High.

Both are youngsters and conceded excellent chances to hold on to their respective jobs. Most interest will center in Walsh, who comes to the Browns, as a candidate for Bob Wallace's job. He was purchased from the Mobile (Southern League) team for $2500. High will try his fortune with the Detroit Tigers, where he will endeavor to crowd Bob Veach, Ty Cobb or Sam Crawford out of the pasture.

High served with the Hartford (Connecticut State League) team last season, after he had been turned back by Manager McGraw of the Giants. The Little Napoleon voted him too inexperienced, but he is believed to have obtained enough knowledge during the 1912 campaign to enable him to hold onto regularly this time.

Walsh and High are graduates of the Trolley League, Walsh having played several seasons ago with the Ben Millers, while High performed with Belleville.

Both are young, ambitious, and appear to have the ability to hold on. Their friends wish them well.

Yeatman Five to Play Soldan in Inaugural Round

Four Teams in High School League Start Season at Louisiana Hall Tonight.

The inaugural basket ball games of the season in the High School League will be staged Saturday night at Louisiana Hall and from present indications the struggle for the championship will be harder fought than in any previous year. Soldan High, the runner-up for the title last year, and Yeatman, the league champions, will meet, while McKinley High and Central will compare their skill at the indoor sport.

Considerable interest is attached to the contests this year, inasmuch as all of the schools will be minus a majority of players from last year's teams. In fact, the personnel of the teams will be altered to such an extent that only five players from last year's teams remain in the league. Central and Yeatman have two each, while Soldan has only one, with McKinley furnishing an entire new quintet.

But none of the teams have any advantage in the portion of players left over from last year. McKinley High has built up a machine of players that looks as good as any in the league. This has been verified by the fact that an alumni team, consisting of a majority of the players that won the championship in 1908, only succeeded in defeating the Crimson five by the score of 47 to 26.

The former champions of the South Side were rated the best aggregation on the floor in the Interscholastic League, which speaks pretty well of the chances of the McKinley team this year.

Beside a complete change in the players for the coming games, Soldan, McKinley and Central will present new coaches this year. Coach Mahood, who has done so well at Central, will be succeeded by Coach Cullen, while Sandlich replaces Most at Soldan and Voss takes charge at McKinley instead of Lauterbach. What these tutors will be able to do against Coach McCluskey's proteges at Yeatman remains to be seen. Messrs. Voss and Cullen, however, are very clever handlers of athletes.

The lineups:

McKinley	Positions.	Central.
Grout	Right forward	Mann
French	Left forward	McElroy
Herbert	Center	Brown
Lehlebach	Right guard	Mosier-Moll
Fitzgerald	Left guard	Botts
Soldan.	Positions.	Yeatman High.
Portouis	Right forward	Hirsch
Grout	Center	Wilson
Kimble	Right guard	Magenau
McCormick	Left guard	Mueller

MANAGER CLARKE MAKES PERSONAL CALL ON ROGER

Eager to Lineup Ex-Cardinal Leader, Pirate Boss Confers With Duke in Toledo.

ROGER NOT EXPECTED IN ST. LOUIS TODAY

GEORGE T. PRIEST, Roger Bresnahan's attorney, departs at 5 o'clock, Saturday, for New York, where he will represent the deposed Cardinal manager at the special meeting of the National League magnates Monday.

According to Mr. Priest, Bresnahan is not expected in St. Louis Saturday, as a report from Toledo had it. Roger will likely proceed direct to New York from Toledo.

It was Bresnahan's original plan to remain away from the meeting, but on the advise of friends closely identified with the game, he was advised to attend the meeting and personally present his case.

Manager Fred Clark of the Pirates didn't wait until he reached New York to put in a bid for Roger Bresnahan's services. Instead he personally called on the Tralee Terror at the latter's home in Toledo Friday for a conference.

Just what transpired at the gathering is unknown but Clarke has stated before that he will go the limit in trying to make Bresnahan a member of the Corsairs. Bresnahan intimated that he would not discuss his future until his case with the Cardinals was settled.

Whether the National League magnates permit Bresnahan's attorney to sit in at the meeting remains to be seen. It is hinted, however, that Roger will be fairly treated, in which event it is probable that he will be permitted to have his advisers present when his case is heard.

Mrs. Helene Britton, owner of the Cardinals, will also be at the meeting with a fine array of legal talent, i. e., Lawyers Jones, Hocker and Huggins, although the last named will hardly take any part in the controversy unless it is to testify as to Roger's behavior during the 1912 campaign.

Hedges Is Due Saturday.

President Robert L. Hedges of the Browns is due in St. Louis Saturday, following a two months' pleasure trip spent in California with Mrs. Hedges and Robert Lee Jr. The Browns' owner will linger in St. Louis but a day and will then proceed to Chicago, where the American League's annual meeting is to be held Tuesday.

It is hardly probable that any big trades will be made, although most any player on the team, save Pratt, Shotton, Hamilton and Baumgardner will be disposed of if more desirable talent is obtained in exchange. Mr. Hedges will likely sell some of the undesirables to minor leaguers during his stay in Chicago.

Manager Stovall is not coming East for the big meeting. During Mr. Hedges' tour of California he held several conferences with the Browns' field commander and is well versed with the wishes of the manager.

Cobb, Crawford, Dubuc and Stanage are said to be the only Tigers sure of their jobs next season. When President Navin and Manager Jennings attend the American League meeting they will be ready to talk trade for any other member of the Royal Bengals. They plan a thorough housecleaning.

Umpire Jimmy Johnstone is not going to work in the National League next season. That's because he and President Lynch do not get along well. In setting forth at Lynch, Johnstone says:

"I have been treated shamefully by Lynch. There are some umpires who are breaking in the League now who are getting more money than I am. I have put in a long time as an umpire and do not make enough now to keep my family. As for Lynch and I not being on good terms, there is no doubt about that. In fact, if Lynch was the President of the United States, I would move out of the country. Now that is how we stand."

The fact that the National Commission has reinstated Emory Olsen to good standing may mean that the former Louisville infielder has recovered from his illness and will be a member of the Browns' baseball party on the training trip to Waco, Tex., next March.

Probably the failure of Olsen to report for play in the spring of 1910 more than anything else caused the downfall of the Browns. He was figured on as a certain regular for second base, and Messrs. Hedges and O'Connor turned loose Jimmy Williams, believing Olsen would fill the bill.

He failed to report and the team was left with practically no second baseman. Possibly Truesdale, the St. Louis boy, tried to step up the vacancy. Olsen was obtained from the Louisville team, and was recruited as the star of the American Association in 1909.

The Detroit club is said to be willing to pass over John Lawrence Cornbon to the Reds in exchange for Frank Chance, the ex-Peerless leader. Cornbon is wanted by Manager Evers of the Cubs as part payment for Joe Tinker. It is Owner Navin's plan to turn over Chance to the New York Americans if the former Cub reports to the Yankees.

Hank O'Day has received an offer of a job as a National League umpire, but hasn't accepted. If he prefers to go to work on Ban Johnson's staff it is said that Lynch will not stand in his way, although the National League would be entitled to first call.

Among other things to come up at the National League meeting is the deduction of 10 per cent of the Giants' world's series profits to be distributed among the other clubs. This money was not paid out by the Giants, as the late John T. Brush objected. The matter has been in the hands of an arbitrative committee since the big show, and the decision will likely be announced next Tuesday.

Because "The" Brottenstein and Bill Hunt prolonged their baseball usefulness by forking South after their major League career, Cy Young may try Dixie land. He has received an offer from Manager Billy Smith of the Atlanta (Southern League) club, and will probably accept.

Lehigh on Yale's Schedule.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 7.—It is announced here that Lehigh University has been offered a place in Yale's football schedule at New Haven on Oct. 18. It stated that Lehigh also will resume football relations with Pennsylvania.

Total sales, 227,800 shares.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"Activity was greatly diminished on today's stock market which, however, repeated in a small way yesterday's movement. After a fractional rise around the opening, prices of many leading stocks declined something like a point, but discovered promptly and before the close were selling slightly above yesterday.

"Foreign stock markets were also quiet. Foreign exchange did not move and it was impossible to learn whether bids for London's Transvaal gold would be made or not next Monday, by our bankers. London advices still express concern at this possibility, and warn New York of a 6 per cent Bank of England rate if we continue to take these gold arrivals.

"It is in this respect a singular situation—not at all resembling that of the present month in 1906 or 1905, in both of which years the bank's hand was forced by huge American borrowings in London, used for the purpose of maintaining an extensive and precarious speculation on our Stock Exchange.

"The present position of the sterling market, and our present requisitions on London's gold, are perfectly legitimate. They are not even based primarily on our high money rates, but are clearly a result of our huge agricultural exports (our cotton shipments to England, for instance, have now actually passed those of a year ago) and of London's recent purchases of our stocks.

"There was little news of financial purport. The country's November bank clearings broke all records for the month, and the weekly mercantile trade reviews promise a record-breaking 'holiday trade' for the country as a whole. As bearing on the question of the cotton crop's size, and of the cotton market's belief that the ginning returns' must henceforth be very small, it is interesting to note that the amount of cotton 'brought into sight' since the season began, now exceeds that of the similar period in 1911.

"The bank statement showed the good results, so far as concerns the money market, of this week's Stock Exchange liquidation. Loans are reduced no less than $42,000,000, which reflects both that process and the completion of the end of November settlements. Cash holdings are practically unchanged in the actual showing, the week's slight loss to the interior having manifestly been offset by gold arriving from Europe. The net result is that last week's actual deficit of $5,067,000 is changed to a surplus of $3,016,000."

Oil Stock Dividend.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The declaration of an initial dividend of 1¾ per cent on the common stock of the California Petroleum Co. and a dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock was announced here today.

CROP ESTIMATES KEEP THE COTTON MARKET IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 4 points, in response to slightly lower cables than due, but very quickly rallied on covering by recent large sellers and a scattering demand, based on bullish trade reports and the average estimate of Memphis Cotton Exchange members placing the crop at 13,986,000 bales, including linters.

After selling about 5 to 7 points net higher the market met a renewal of liquidation by longs and eased off to about the closing prices of last night with subsequent fluctuations rather narrow and irregular.

The market closed steady, net unchanged to 3 points higher.

COAL PRICES EASY,

The Black Diamond says: "One note runs through the market reports from all commercial centers this week. It is to the effect that a break which customarily comes in coal prices in December is here, bringing about, in most places, a marked recession from the extraordinary prices previously prevailing. However, low prices now lack 50 to 75 cents a ton, on bituminous coal, of being as low as those prices have reached in previous December price reactions, and in fact are almost as much above what might be called the average December prices.

"The one fact which stands out prominently everywhere is that, while buying by householders is light, and while, consequently, buying by retailers is light, the supply in no place is strongly in excess of demand. This has given an ominous aspect to the market immediately ahead. If in warm weather, when the transportation is free and car supply easy, and when the coal buying is light, there is almost a balance between supply and demand, the fear is that cold weather will bring a coal shortage of serious proportions and prices which are commensurate thereto."

CHURCH NOTICES.

CHURCH OF THE MESSIAH, Unitarian, Union and Von Versen. Rev. J. W. Day. Service 11 a. m. Sermon: "Two Aspects of Provincialism."

CHURCH OF THE UNITY, Park and Armstrong avenues. Dr. Dodson will speak at 11 a. m. on the unique task of the liberal church. It does not pretend to meet the religious needs of all men in all stages of development. No church can do that. It exists to serve those who would be Christians and yet true children of the intellectual life of our age. It seeks to fuse thoughtfulness with spiritual impulse and give faith the rational guidance without which it becomes fanaticism. Its view of Judaism and Christianity as a living principle which is still creating new forms for itself. An idealistic interpretation of human experience and an inspiring conception of the true life of man are what the Church of the Unity has to give to those who are able to receive it.

ETHICAL SOCIETY, at Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard. 11 a. m., address by Percival Chubb on "Jean-Francois Millet and the Ethical Influence of Art." The public is cordially invited.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, Delmar, near Grand avenue. The minister, Horace F. Holton, preaches at 11 a. m., "According to Your Faith." At 8 p. m., Gospel song service and brief address, "Exiles from the Kingdom." Sunday School, 9:45.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Washington avenue and Forty-first street. Rev. W. J. McKittrick, D. D., pastor. Morning at 11, topic: "Direct and Indirect Influences." Evening at 8. "Give Him Another Chance."

GRAND AVENUE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Grand and Washington avenues. Rev. F. F. Cannon, D. D., pastor. Services 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.: Sunday school, 9:30 a. m.; Bible class, 10 a. m. Everybody cordially welcome.

Lost and Found

Solid agate 15c line, minimum 20c.

THAT LOST ARTICLE MAY NOT BE FOUND TODAY

Or tomorrow or next week. In fact, a month or more may elapse before it turns up. A little persistency may be necessary. Often the article remains unfound for fear of prosecution, or hope of a more satisfactory reward may delay the restoration. Then, the belated awakening of the finder's conscience explains many delays. But persistency and Post-Dispatch wants will usually recover a lost article if it has honest finder to find it. The service of the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau is also enlisted in behalf of advertisers.

Our Feathered Friends.

ROSE PASTOR PHELPS-STOKES told at a charity society a "country-week" story.

"Under an old apple tree," she said, "I gathered a half dozen little country-weekers about me one afternoon, and, holding up a book, I said: "'Now, children, I'm going to read to you. This is the book. It is called "Our Feathered Friends." Who are our feathered friends, does anyone know?'

"The urchins on the grass regarded one another doubtfully; then a little chap piped in a shrill key: "'Angels.'"—Washington Star.

Far-Fetched.

"WHAT do you think of our friend Spynne's literary effusion? Don't you think he carries his ideas a bit too far?"

"Decidedly. He told me the other day that he had to walk 30 miles to find a publisher."

PRIZE WINNING USELESS INVENTIONS

Awards in the Comic Page contest which began last Saturday—New rules adopted for future contest.

Walter Culver, Windermere Hotel	$5.00
Gust Meyer, 4230 N. 11th St.	5.00
Lewis Thomas, 819 N. 2nd St., St. Charles	5.00
Ellis C. Grote, 2260 Clarence Av.	5.00
H. D. Canaday, 5274 Waterman Av.	5.00

WHEN the Comic Page offered $5 for every useless invention which it accepted for publication it did not expect such a flood of brilliancy. Hundreds of ingenious, but thoroughly valueless devices have been invented during the past week and records of the brain storms have been received by the Comic Page. From the mass of GOOD worthless inventions five have been accepted for publication. The pictures and descriptions appear herewith.

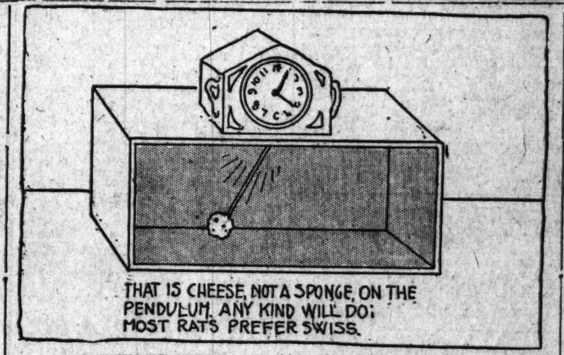
Having accomplished so much in awakening the inventors of folly the Comic Page will not desist.

In the new contest which we now announce, the prizes for foolish and useless inventions will be:

First Prize	$5.00
Second Prize	1.00
Third Prize	1.00
Fourth Prize	1.00
Fifth Prize	1.00

Come on, ye inventors, and show your mettle if you would win our metal. At the above reduced rates we offer more money than 999,999,999 inventors in a billion get for their devices. Be foolish but—a suggestion—let's get away from rat traps and fly killers next week.

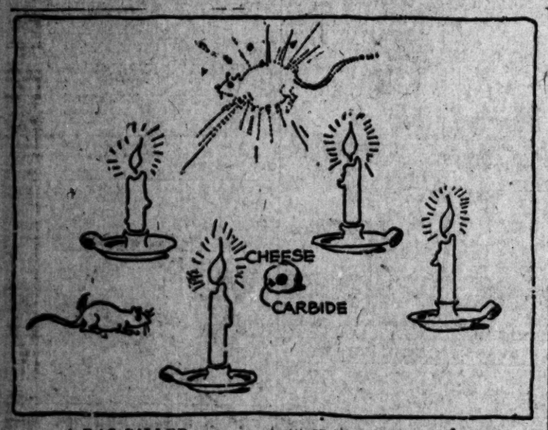
An invention to catch rabbits fully explained pictorially



A PENDURATTER.

PUT a small piece of cheese on the end of a clock pendulum, swinging in a box as per illustration. The rat seeing or smelling the cheese will chase it to and fro until exhausted, when you may chloroform it.

H. D. CANADAY,
5274 Waterman av.



A RAT KILLER.

ARRANGE four candles so as to form a square. In a piece of cheese put a small piece of carbide in the center. Place the piece of cheese in the middle of the square formed by the candles, light the candles and go to bed. A rat will smell the cheese and come in and eat it. The carbide will immediately form gas and he (the rat) will rise over the candle flames and explode. The explosion will awake you so you can pick up his remains.

THE CANINO MOTOR.

AS everyone knows, the work attached to making apple butter is very arduous, and falls upon the housewife. To lighten this burden we have invented the above motor, upon which vast sums of money and labor have been spent to bring it to its present state of perfection.

Directions for Using: Take a dog and harness him to the shafts at end of the crank which works the stirring paddles. Then you take a tin can and attach it to his caudal appendage. You then whisper the magic word "Scat" into his ear and let go, and the motor motes. You may then retire and recline at ease in your Morris chair or play upon the piano, with the satisfaction of knowing that the "Canino-Motor" is doing the work effectively. Unlike most motors, the "Canino-Motor" is easy to start, but rather difficult to stop, this however, may be effected by means of a well-aimed brickbat, the like of which may be found in any back yard. JAMES THOMAS, 819 N. Second St., St. Charles, Mo.

PATENT PICKLE COMPASS.

A BITE in the pickle causes the juices to fly forward and of pickle, where compas is attached; the pickle expands, thereby setting the delicate machinery in motion.

One look at the dial and the direction of the juice can be ascertained at a glance. This invention should be a boon to owners of evening gowns, saving many thousands of dollars. ELLIS C. GROTE, 2260 Clarence av., St. Louis.

STORIES ST. LOUISANS TELL

DOCTOR BEATING TANBARK.

J. G. ANNONYMOUS says: "Dr. Malvern B. Clopton is exhibiting with pardonable pride to the set of medicos who lunch at the University Club, a magnificent jaguar skin secured by him on the great Milmo ranch in Mexico where Bart Walker's Racquet Club legion recently hunted big game. While it is generally supposed it takes months to tan such a skin Dr. Clopton claims the tiger cat was only shot a week ago and gives many details of his encounter single-handed with the fierce beast."

Constrained.

SITTING alone, she wept and wept and wept.

"I have no way to turn," she sobbed.

Presently she dried her eyes. High resolve sat upon her brow.

"I cannot live else!" she exclaimed.

With a deft movement she returned her new corsets to their box, inclosing a note which ordered a pair four sizes larger.

The Grouch.

"ALLOW me to congratulate you."

"What for?"

"Oh, for just anything—the sunshine, the blue skies, the fact that you are up and about. Isn't that something?"

"No."

"Then congratulate me for not having a disposition like yours."

THE JARR FAMILY

By Roy L. McCardell

Mr. Jarr is burdened with an extra share of responsibility.

"AS long as I live," said Mrs. Jarr firmly, "I never want to hear the name of your Uncle Henry mentioned."

Mr. Jarr said nothing in reply, but passed his plate for more of the genuine country sausage—made in East St. Louis of beef scrap and corn meal.

"I never want to see your Uncle Henry. I never want to go near him, have him come near us or hold any communication with him!"

He was MRS. Jarr's Uncle Henry.

But having enticed Gertrude, the light running domestic, away with him, Mrs. Jarr put him out of her life and kinship forever. She made him Mr. Jarr's uncle, and Mr. Jarr did not dare disown the relative that had been thrust upon him.

"Who would have thought Gertrude would give up a nice pleasant place in a modern apartment house—it IS modern, even if it is old and hasn't an elevator and a hallboy. Ah, well, it was all your fault!"

"All my fault!" queried Mr. Jarr.

He was willing to accept Uncle Henry but he didn't want to take all the other blames.

"Yes!" said Mrs. Jarr. "You were always talking about a nice little home in the country, and making an easy living by raising chickens. And you kept talking about 'going back to the land' and all that sort of stuff. Gertrude heard you and, so when Uncle Henry offered her a place on his farm she left us!"

"She'll get enough of it. You should worry!" retorted Mr. Jarr.

"Yes, I should worry!" Mrs. Jarr replied. "Gertrude knew my ways and I knew hers. Even if she did break a dish now and then or occasionally burned what she was cooking, she had been with us so long—nearly a year.

"Indeed, although Gertrude never saved a cent and always drew her money before it was due, she was very fond of the children, and in every way—except she would not wear a cap and apron—was just like those faithful old family retainers one sees in the moving pictures or on the stage."

"No, you're wrong there," said Mr. Jarr, "the faithful old family retainer with the surprisingly big bank account in the movies and in melodramas is always doddering old MEN servants, who blow their noses in bandanna handkerchiefs and totter in and out, and wag their heads and roll their eyes over the misfortunes clustering thick and fast upon the young master—God bless him!—and the ancient family seat of Shynnbone Hall!"

"Well, I won't argue with you about it. But your Uncle Henry has taken the best girl I ever had. And I never want to hear his name again!"

Just then Master Willie Jarr brought up the morning mail, and Mr. Jarr, noting a whitish brown envelope, with a smeared, scrawled address, attempted to burk it. For it was from Uncle Henry.

"Give me that letter!" said Mrs. Jarr.

Mr. Jarr handed it over, and Mrs. Jarr opened it with a hairpin.

"He doesn't say a word about Gertrude!" she said.

"He must have wanted something or he wouldn't have written," said Mr. Jarr. "What is it?"

"Oh, here it is!" said Mrs. Jarr. "He wants me to see if I can get him a good servant girl as the country girls all want to work in the stocking factory in Smithtown in the winter and the canning factories in the summer. He says Gertrude, who insisted on going to Hay Corners with him, has left, as she did not like Aunt Hetty's cooking, and the family get up so early they disturbed her of a morning; waking her up with their heavy shoes and their conversation."

"Well, you'll get your Gertrude back. She'll be glad to come back," suggested Mr. Jarr.

"I wouldn't take her back if she begged on her knees!" said Mrs. Jarr. "And furthermore, I don't need to. Mrs. Blammer has been corresponding with a genuine country girl, who is willing and strong, and a good cook, and who is anxious to come to the city. I've sent her car fare."

"Still, if Gertrude comes back"—began Mr. Jarr.

"You let me run the house, please!" said Mrs. Jarr shortly.

The Infant's Might.

"SAW a wonderful sight at a circus last week."

"New sensation?"

"Midget trainer, made up like a baby, put a big elephant through all kinds of tricks."

"Just a make-believe baby did that, you say?"

"Come down to our house some night and I will show you how a real baby can put all the members of a big family through their paces."—Youngstown Telegraph.

LIGHTING SERVICE

"Welsbach" is the name, and the Shield of Quality is the trade-mark, of the best gas mantles made.

They are most brilliant, most durable, preserve truest color-value, and use least gas.

The best proof of this is to use Welsbach Mantles exclusively. A discriminating buyer will be satisfied with no other.

For UPRIGHT and INVERTED LAMPS
Best Quality, 35c. Others, 25c, 15c, 10c.
